CHAPTER I
GALICIA AND HER PARENTAGE

The reputation of a horse quickly fades. Ideas exist as to which were absolutely the best ever known, it being generally assumed that the question is between St. Simon and Ormonde, two who were never beaten—and it is exceedingly rare for any horse to escape at least one defeat—though admirers of other animals hold exalted opinions of them. But the great horse who has stood out from his contemporaries is soon forgotten, nor can accurate details concerning him, the achievements on which his fame rests, be easily found. They are hidden away in the files of old sporting papers, of other papers, indeed, for at any rate of late years there have been few journals which have not devoted considerable space to racing. But these publications are not readily accessible. Articles in a magazine now and then, or a chapter in a casual book which deals with the sport, would also supply particulars more or less authoritative if it were known where such information was to be discovered. But it is only in extremely rare cases that justice is done to the memory of the horses on whom the character and ascendancy of the British thoroughbred mainly rest.

It is for this reason that I have undertaken to write an account of Galicia, her Forbears and her Offspring; for she herself sprang from the most aristocratic of parents, and her children include, besides a Derby winner, one who, notwithstanding that he missed that unique distinction, was beyond doubt the best horse in the Derby of his year; for I am of course speaking of Bayardo, who subsequently showed with the most unmistakable distinctness what ought to have happened at Epsom, where the result of the classic was affected by an accident, to be described in its proper place.

Before dealing with Galicia herself something must be said about her parents. In the year 1897 Mr. A. W. Cox, known in racing history as "Mr. Fairie," owned a mare named Isoletta, a daughter of Isonomy, and sent her to Galopin, then standing at the Blankney Stud Farm, and rated as the leading sire of his period. Nine of his yearlings had been sold the previous year for an average of 1154 guineas. It is not certain that there was ever a much better horse—possibly in this connection the "much" should be omitted—than the son of Vedette and Flying Duchess; and in saying this I am quoting the opinion of one who knew the horse well, and certainly was not in the least disposed to underrate the merit of Galopin’s most distinguished son, St. Simon aforesaid. It happened that for some years it was my custom during many mornings in every year to ride out and watch the work done by the late John Dawson’s string, and it was from him that I gathered what can hardly be a very wrong estimate of Galopin. A famous horse in training at that period was Petrarch, Galopin’s senior by a year. Petrarch, a son of Lord Clifden, won the Middle Park Plate, amongst other races, as a two-year-old; as a three-year-old he carried off the Two Thousand Guineas and the Leger; as a four-year-old he took the Ascot Cup. There can be little doubt, none indeed, about his merit, and John Dawson used to tell me that Galopin was always a considerable number of pounds and lengths in front of him. As just remarked, very few horses are found in Turf history who have not failed once or twice, and it is to a great extent because St.
GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

Simon and Ormonde were never beaten that they are so highly esteemed. There may be perfectly legitimate excuse for a defeat, possibly for a couple of failures, but these things are not regarded: what men remember is that a hiatus has occurred in the series of winning brackets. Galopin carried well-nigh all before him, but he was not unbeaten. He did not actually win, that is to say come in first for, the Hyde Park Plate at Epsom (1874), which nevertheless stands to his credit. What happened is described in the Racing Calendar for that year. There was an objection, and the report of the race reads:

"We are of opinion that Constable on Cachmere cannoned unintentionally against Morris riding Galopin, which prevented the latter from winning. Galopin is therefore the winner of the Hyde Park Plate, and Cachmere is not entitled to a place.

"C. Alexander.
"W. S. Stirling Crawfurd (for Mr. Chaplin).
"H. J. Rous."

The son of Vedette then went on to Ascot, where he started twice, for the Fern Hill Stakes and for the New Stakes, favourite on both occasions at 6 to 4, and he won without difficulty. In the Middle Park Plate his only defeat occurred. A field of twenty-four went to the post, the largest with one exception which has ever assembled: there were thirty starters when Petrarch won next year. Galopin was backed at 6 to 1, the favourite being a colt called Holy Friar, the property of the Lincolnshire clergyman who raced under the adopted name of "Mr. Launde," and who is chiefly known in the annals of the Turf as the owner of Apology, the mare who won the One Thousand Guineas, the Oaks, the Leger, and as a five-year-old the Ascot Cup. Holy Friar, 2 to 1, finished unplaced, there being a great fight between Mr. R. R. Christopher's Plebeian, Lord Dupplin's Per Se, and Galopin, heads only dividing them, and an objection for bumping followed, Tom Cannon on Per Se declaring that he had been prevented from winning by Mordan on Plebeian, whilst Morris appeared to think that with a fair field and no favour Galopin would just have got home. The objection, however, was overruled. This was Galopin's one lapse. Afterwards he was only out twice as a two-year-old and neither race meant anything. He only found one opponent in a sweepstakes at Newmarket, an indifferent colt called Tresorier, whom he beat at his leisure with odds of 100 to 7 on him, and he then walked over for a small stake at the Second October.

GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

As a three-year-old Galopin led off with a match against Mr. Henry Chaplin's Stray Shot, destined to have her name writ large in Turf history as the dam of the Two Thousand and Derby winner Shotover. Galopin was set to give Stray Shot 10 lb. over the Rowley Mile; odds of 11 to 8 were laid on him, and he won in a canter by eight lengths. The Derby followed, and of this I give a record:

Epsom, 1875.

The Ninety-sixth Renewal of the Derby Stakes of 50 sovs. each, h. ft. for three-year-olds, colts 8 st. 10 lb., and fillies 8 st. 5 lb.; the second received 300 sovs. and the third 150 sovs. out of the stakes. About a mile and a half, starting at the New High Level Starting Post. (198 subs.—£4950.)

Betting.—2 to 1 against Galopin, 100 to 12 Balfe, 9 to 1 Camballo, 100 to 8 Repentance colt, 100 to 7 each Claremont and Bay of Naples, 20 to 1 Woodlands, 22 to 1 Temple Bar, 25 to 1 each Seymour, Breechloader, and Earl of Dartrey, 30 to 1 Telescope, 100 to 3 Fareham, 1000 to 15 each Lord Berners and Gilbert, and 100 to 1 each Garterley Bell and Punch. Won by a length; six lengths between second and third.

Why Galopin's Ascot exertions were confined to the Fern Hill Stakes I am not aware. It seems not a little odd that a Derby winner should have been brought out for a five-furlong race, though the fact is interesting as proof of his remarkable speed. Here he was backed at 2 to 1 on and won by four lengths. One of the speediest horses then in training was Lowlander, and what was thought of him is proved by the readiness of his owner to make a match with Galopin over the Rowley Mile, £1000, £200 forfeit. It is remarkable, indeed, that Lowlander, then a five-year-old, however, should have attempted to give the Derby winner 12 lb. That was at the time 4 lb. more than weight for age—the scale has been since slightly revised, and at the present time over a mile in October, five-year-old, six-year-old and aged horses give three-year-olds 7 lb. Galopin, however, won his match, and was only seen once afterwards, when he took the Newmarket Derby, being subsequently sent to stand at Mr. Barrow's establishment at Newmarket at a fee of 100 guineas.

This was the sire of Galicia, and more than passing reference should be made to her maternal grandsire, Isonomy. It is tempting to go back a generation and talk of the sire of Isonomy, Sterling, who must have been a remarkable stayer and weight carrier, though he did not win the races on which reputations are generally founded.

This son of Oxford, dam by Flatcatcher, comes so closely into the record that he must not be hastily passed over. He was at any rate a remarkable horse. His start was humble enough; he came out for the Castle Park Stakes at Warwick, 5 sovs. each, 50 added—in his day it will be perceived the minimum had not been raised to £100. He started at evens and was beaten two lengths by a filly called Miss Lizzie, who never seems to have done anything. Sterling made some mark later in the season, however, for he won the Hopeful and the Rutland Stakes at the Newmarket First October Meeting.
AND HER OFFSPRING

As a three-year-old the colt flew at high game, making his first appearance in the Two Thousand Guineas, in which Bothwell beat him a length. A well-known animal at this time was King of the Forest, whose form with Sterling must have perplexed those who endeavoured to derive guidance from it. In the Two Thousand Guineas King of the Forest finished third, three lengths behind Sterling. In the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Ascot Sterling's ability to stay seemed likely to give him a stronger advantage over the colt he had beaten at Newmarket, especially as King of the Forest carried 9 st. 1 lb., Sterling 8 st. 13 lb. The former, however, won the race, Sterling not in the first three, and as a matter of course when they met at evens in a Biennial two days later odds were laid on King of the Forest. This time Sterling won by three lengths! He had a busy three-year-old season. At the Newmarket July he won the Summer Stakes, carrying 8 st. 12 lb., from Azalea, 6 st. 4 lb., and Piquillo, 6 st. 2 lb. This was good, and his performance in the Chesterfield Cup at Goodwood far from bad, as he failed by only a length to give the winner 33 lb. In the Great Eastern Railway Handicap he was burdened with 9 st. 6 lb. This race, by the way, led to trouble, some of the jockeys being reported by the starter. Archer was suspended "from September 28th to October 12th, both days inclusive," the sentence ran, Wheeler having to stop riding on the same date, his sentence being extended to the 19th. The extra week seems to show nice discrimination on the part of the Stewards. In the Cambridgeshire, one of the most sensational races for that handicap ever known, Sterling had 8 st. 11 lb. and ran a dead heat for second place with Allbrook, 5 years, 6 st. 9 lb., Sabinus, 4 years, 8 st. 7 lb., winning by a head. Henry was favourite for this Cambridgeshire, and is returned at the unusual odds of 17 to 4—one would have thought that 4 to 1 was near enough; and two Derby winners ran—Favonius, then, of course, a three-year-old, in at the same weight as Sterling, backed at 11 to 2, and Kingcraft, the winner of the previous year, 8 st. 4 lb., an outsider at 40 to 1. Sterling, it will be seen, had lost the Two Thousand by a length, and in the autumn at Newmarket finished several, if not many, lengths before the Derby winner of the year. Sterling's last appearance of the season was in the Free Handicap for Three-Year-Olds, which he won carrying 8 st. 6 lb.

As a four-year-old he did little. The Craven Stakes was at this period, 1871, an optional Selling Race, worth £175, and this represented the whole of the colt's winnings for the season.
AND HER OFFSPRING

He ran for the Gold Vase at Ascot, favourite at 7 to 4, and was beaten half a length by Albert Victor at 10 to 1, his last effort being in the All-aged Stakes, which on that occasion was certainly remarkable. The distance, it is perhaps needless to observe, is something over five furlongs, and the runners were, besides Sterling—who as just remarked had been out for the two-mile Gold Vase on the Tuesday of the Meeting, and was indeed an unquestionable stayer—Prince Charlie, who had run second for the Leger, and Wenlock, who had carried off the Doncaster classic. I do not remember any occasion on which three horses with such records have contested a sprint race.

As for the Cambridgeshire, the race is described by Sterling's jockey in the volume of his Riding Recollections and Turf Stories. Custance writes: "It was an unlucky day for me when I rode Sterling in the Cambridgeshire. It rained in torrents and was dreadfully cold; I had been wasting for other races, and we were about three-quarters of an hour at the post. There were thirty-seven runners, and Sterling, who had behaved himself pretty well the first ten minutes, became almost unmanageable afterwards. He reared, kicked, and did everything he should not have done, as his temper was upset. At last the flag fell to a straggling start, and before we had gone two hundred yards I was in the first three with 9 st. 7 lb. When we had gone a quarter of a mile I was second, with my reins like soft soap. I ought really to have been about nineteenth or twentieth, with top weight on, but it could not be helped, as I was perfectly helpless; my hands were numbed, and the sweat from the horse's neck made the reins quite past holding—in fact I was under every possible disadvantage, though I finished third."

Elsewhere in the book Custance writes: "It is quite impossible for me to mention all the fine races I have seen Fordham ride. With one especially I was very much impressed, and so were many others who will corroborate me. This was when he won the Cambridgeshire of 1871 on Sabinus. This race especially was most beautifully timed and resolutely finished." It thus appears that Sterling must have been unlucky not to win. Fine weather, avoidance of long delay at the start, and an ordinary jockey instead of the redoubtable Fordham on Sabinus, might well have altered the result.

An idea seems to exist—I have read it more than once, for when a blunder appears in print it is frequently reproduced—that Isonomy never ran as a two-year-old. As a matter of fact he did so thrice, making his first appearance in 1877 in the Brighton Club Two-Year-Old Stakes. Something was thought of him, for he was backed at 9 to 4, the race going to an even-money favourite, Mr. Ellerlie's Ersila, by Rosicrucian, one of three colts—the other two being Blue Gown and Green Sleeves—between whom Sir Joseph Hawley seems to have been unable to make up his mind before the Derby of 1868. In this Brighton race Isonomy was a bad third. He came out again for the Second Nursery at Newmarket First October Meeting, and, an 8 to 1 chance, won by half a length from the then Lord Lonsdale's Telegram, backed at half the price. His third outing was in a Nursery at the Houghton Meeting. Here he was not mentioned in the betting, but was only beaten a head by Mr. C. Best's Beadman in receipt of 11 lb. Of course there was nothing in all this to suggest that Isonomy was more than a moderate animal, very moderate perhaps; but he made exceptional improvement, and next year it was decided by his owner, Mr. F. Gretton, to keep him for the Cambridgeshire, for which he was specially trained. In the circumstances, having done so little the previous season, it cannot be said that he was leniently treated with 7 st. 1 lb., and as will be seen from the record he started at the comfortable odds of 40 to 1. Details follow:

Won by two lengths, half a length between second and third, and a head between third and fourth.

After this his career was one of almost uninterrupted success. As a four-year-old he ran for the Ascot Gold Vase, one of his two opponents being Lord Falmouth's Silvio—who had won the Derby of 1877—and on whom 9 to 4 was laid, Archer riding; but Tom Cannon on Isonomy, 11 to 4, beat him half a length. Two days afterwards he was saddled for the Ascot Cup. There were six starters, and, favourite at 2 to 1, he took the trophy, following on with the Goodwood Cup, and the subsequent week the Brighton Cup, which was then a two-mile race. In the Ebor Handicap he had 9 st. 8 lb., which did not deter backers from laying 11 to 8 on him. He won this, and going on to Doncaster added the Cup there to his spoils, 100 to 15 on, though this time there was nothing to spare, as he only got home by a head from Lord Falmouth's Jannette, who had carried off the Leger of the previous year. Isonomy had 9 st. 10 lb. in the Cesarewitch, a burden which has never been borne successfully—the 9 st. 5 lb. of Willonyx is the record. Isonomy was set to give no less a weight than 33 lb. to the good, honest, staying Chippendale, and it detracts little from his character that he could not do so.

As a five-year-old Isonomy was only out twice, on the first occasion in the Manchester Cup, then run over a mile and five furlongs—the distance is now a mile and a half. There were twenty-one starters. Isonomy carried 9 st. 12 lb., and as his merit was not even yet fully recognised 16 to 1 was laid against him, joint favourites being The Abbot and Blue Blood, 6 to 1. Isonomy won by a neck from The Abbot, giving him 3 st. 3 lb.; the second, as a three-year-old in May, had the great advantage of 20 lb.
GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

Isonomy, therefore, comes out nearly 2 st. the better. His other race was the Gold Cup, in which he was opposed by Chippendale and the French colt Zut. Seeing what had happened in the Cesarewitch it is not in the least strange that 9 to 4 should have been laid on Isonomy, though it does seem curious that backers should have been found ready to take 95 to 40 about Chippendale, meeting his former conqueror with no advantage, there being, it is probably needless to add, no penalties or allowances in this race.

Few horses have had a more brilliant career at the stud, Isonomy's offspring including Common, Isinglass, and a host of notable winners, amongst whom, however, his daughter Isoletta is not included. Like so many other mares famous for what they have produced she was no good as a racer, and indeed her daughter Galicia did little, as to which it can only be said that, as usual with her owner's animals, an ambitious programme was mapped out for her.

Galicia first ran for the Kempton Park Two-Year-Old Plate on the 2nd of June 1900.

According to the evidence of her jockey—and Mornington Cannon was one upon whose statements implicit dependence could be placed—Galicia was winning in a canter when she suddenly faltered, and it was found that she had split her pastern. She was never anything like the same mare afterwards.

She came out as a three-year-old for the One Thousand Guineas, and, quoted at 100 to 8, ran nowhere behind the favourite Sir James Miller's Aïda, 13 to 8. Then followed the Oaks, taken by the American mare Cap and Bells II, who had never run in England before and who was never seen again. Galicia was seventh for the Coronation Stakes at Ascot. For a Triennial Produce Stakes at the Newmarket First October Meeting she was fourth, in front, however, of the favourite, Veles.

garded the race as won, when she broke down badly, stopped "as if she had been shot," to quote the familiar phrase, and could never run again.

Galicia was first of all sent to Eager, with a disappointing result. She had no foal; but with regard to this horse something more than casual passing reference seems desirable, for Eager, prior to the appearance of the great horses with whom Mr. Fairie's name will always be associated in Turf history, was at least an animal of special note. Eager was a son of Enthusiast, whose victory in the Two Thousand Guineas of 1889 remains one of the most extraordinary things on record. Enthusiast was the property of Mr. Douglas Baird, one of the four owners whose horses were trained at this period by James Ryan at Green Lodge, which overlooks the Severals at Newmarket. There were, besides Mr. Fairie, Mr. Douglas Baird and Mr. J. H. Houldsworth, both members of the Jockey Club, and Mr. John Wallace. It may certainly be said that the trainer was fortunate in his patrons, as likewise that they were most efficiently served. Enthusiast beat the Duke of Portland's famous Donovan, Mr. Douglas Baird's colt being one of the three who got their heads in front of this well-nigh invincible horse during his career. There can be no doubt that the victory was purely attributable to jockeyship, indeed Tom Cannon—who wore Mr. Douglas Baird's crimson, silver-braided jacket on this occasion, as on many others—gave me his explanation soon after the race. The chief danger to Donovan, so far as any might be supposed to exist, was "Mr. Abington's" Pioneer, and Tom Cannon beat him and Donovan by what at present seems to be considered the old-fashioned expedient of waiting, a method which nevertheless appears to be returning somewhat to vogue. "They had two little races all to themselves a good long way from the post," was Tom Cannon's description, "and when they started on a third I thought I would join in!" He did this with such admirable effect that he beat Donovan a head, a result which past and future form, direct and collateral, proved to be ridiculously wrong. Enthusiast met Donovan more than once afterwards but never got near him.

Mr. Fairie, however, thought sufficiently well of Enthusiast to send his mare Greeba to him; and Eager, their son, made his first appearance on any course at Lincoln for the Brocklesby Stakes of 1896, ridden by F. Pratt, now known as a successful trainer, and a nephew of the famous Fred Archer. Eager, almost favourite, backed at 9 to 2, the actual favourite being Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's Jest, finished third to this filly, but soon started on a notably victorious career, deservedly earning the character of being one of the speediest horses of his generation. He won the Royal Two-Year-Old Plate at Kempton at his second attempt, a race worth £2780, from Lord Rosebery's well-known mare Chelandry, who was to become dam of good horses, including Neil Gow, an animal destined to be closely associated with the fortunes of one of Galicia's two best sons. This opportunity may be taken of correcting an impression which largely prevails to the effect that Eager was merely a six-furlong horse. His great speed made him extraordinarily formidable over this distance, but some of his most notable achievements were in mile races, and sometimes, moreover, over miles on severe courses, the Rowley and the Bunbury amongst others. The greater part of the money he won was in these contests.

As a three-year-old he ran in Galtee More's Derby, which, however, the odds of 50 to 1 against him suggest that he was not expected to win. Galtee More started at 4 to 1 on. At Ascot, Eager won the Rous Memorial over the Hunt Cup course, the Midsummer Plate at Newmarket up the steep Bunbury Hill, the Brighton and

Derby Cups. A curious circumstance about this horse was that he constantly encountered Goletta and she always beat him, though Mr. Leopold de Rothschild has admitted to me that he does not believe his mare was really the better of the two. Their first encounter was in the Chesterfield Stakes at the Newmarket Second July, when Goletta—like Galicia a daughter of Galopin—was regarded as a practical certainty, and started at 7 to 2 on. Against Eager 4 to 1 was laid, and he was beaten a short head. The two then met in the Rous Memorial at the Newmarket First October, and Eager failed by a head for the second time. In the Criterion the pair were again opponents; this time Goletta was second to King Edward's Oakdene, who had, however, an advantage in the weights, Eager fourth. As three-year-olds Eager, having won the Rous Memorial at Ascot and the Midsummer Plate aforesaid incidentally, resumed his antagonism with Goletta in the St. George Stakes at Liverpool. Here 5 to 2 was laid on him, notwithstanding that the distance was a mile and three furlongs, which may be accepted as having been beyond his tether; but Goletta was giving him a pound instead of receiving a sex allowance. She beat him by five lengths. Perhaps Eager was never better than as a four-year-old, when he won the Portland Plate, the Duchess of York Stakes, and other races, failing only by a head in the Derby Cup, carrying 9 st. 6 lb., and giving 39 lb. to the winner, Waterhen, a useful filly of his own age. During four seasons he carried Mr. Fairie's white, orange sleeves and cap, but as a six-year-old became the property of Mr. L. Neumann, for whom he continued to win races. The horse had very small feet and weak ankles. Mr. Fairie did not care to use him as a sire, helping, however, by sending a few mares, to give him a chance; and he did much better at the stud than his original owner anticipated.

Undeterred by the first failure, Mr. Fairie sent Galicia again to Eager in 1903, and this time she produced a colt who was called Eastern, and so enters into my story. He was a good-looking bay, who did not come to hand till late in the season, indeed it was not until September that Alec Taylor—for the horses had left Ryan's stable at Newmarket and gone to Manton—was able to bring him out in the Breeders' Foal Plate at Kempton Park. Major Eustace Loder's Galvani had acquired the reputation of being in all probability the best of his year, and odds of 11 to 4 were laid on him. I have a vivid recollection of the race, as whilst it was being run I happened to stand by Lord Rosebery, whose Bezonian, in receipt of 10 lb., beat the favourite by a neck, though the owner of the winner had told me he entertained no hope of success. Lady de Bathe's Yentoi, who was to win the Cesarewitch two years later, was the only one quoted in the market with the exceptions of Galvani and of Bezonian (10 to 1), Eastern figuring among the "25 to 1 others"; but he showed some speed, and little more than a fortnight afterwards, at the Newmarket First October Meeting—we are talking of 1906—easily won a Triennial Produce Stakes. He did not beat very much; the two animals who followed him home, however, Lady de Bathe's Petchora and Sir R. Waldie Griffith's The Ring, had both won races, and it was demonstrated that Eastern was at any rate useful. He ran in the Prendergast without distinction, and only made one other appearance as a two-year-old, when he was second for a Nursery at Liverpool, in which, however, there were only three starters, and the best that can be made of it is that he was giving the winner 18 lb.

I have never agreed with an idea which is held by some people that a horse is necessarily unlucky when he runs second. In these cases a stronger inference is that the winner would have been unfortunate had he been beaten. Eastern as a three-year-old was second on no fewer than six occasions, and he was thrice third, moreover, actually winning only one race in fourteen attempts, and that by no more than a head. He came out for the Column Produce Stakes, in which the Duke of Devonshire's Acclaim had half a length the better of him, and in the Newmarket Stakes a month later either he did not do quite so well or Acclaim did better, for here the Duke's colt beat him a head and a length and a half, Linacre separating them. A third attempt, though not successful, was on the whole to Eastern's credit. This was for the £1000 Hurst Park Yearling Plate. Lord Rosebery's Traquair, another son of Cheländry, by Ayrshire, was favourite at 11 to 10, having been one of the best two-year-olds of his season, though unfortunately touched in the wind. Eastern beat him a neck but was beaten in turn three lengths by Portland Bay, the winner in receipt of 10 lb.

For the Trial Stakes at Ascot Eastern met a useful field. Dean Swift won from King Edward's Slim Lad, Eastern third, giving His Majesty's colt, one of the few sons of Laodamia who has ever been any good, 7 lb. He had established himself, indeed, as just a nice, useful colt, likely to win in his turn when the luck was with him. It was not expected that he would beat Lord

Derby’s Bridge of Canny for the First Foal Stakes at the Newmarket Second July, Bridge of Canny being something more than useful, and winning by a length and a half, giving 10 lb. more than weight for age. The Atlantic Stakes at the Liverpool Meeting must not be passed over without reference, for the favourite here was Orby, who had not been seen in England since he won the Derby. Odds of 7 to 4 were laid on him, and he finished last of the four starters, Eastern, however, being no nearer than third. He went to Goodwood and came near to victory in the Chesterfield Cup, where he met really good animals. Velocity, then a five-year-old, was favourite, and obviously deserved the position, as he won, though only by a neck from Eastern, who beat Dean Swift by a length and a half. Eastern and Dean Swift met on exactly the same terms as in the Trial Stakes at Ascot. There Dean Swift had beaten Mr. Fairie’s colt four lengths and a half, now, as just observed, it was a length and a half the other way, so that, as it is certain from subsequent performances that Dean Swift was not deteriorating, Eastern must have been coming on. His one victory followed, at Hurst Park in the Lennox Plate in August. Here the favourite was Baltinglass, 6 to 5 on. The son of Isinglass and Sibola, who was to run second for the Leger and start one of the hottest favourites on record for the Cesare-witch, at 9 to 4, was in receipt of 9 lb. from Eastern, and Mr. Fairie's colt won by a head. He wound up the season by missing the Free Handicap by a similar margin, All Black giving him 1 lb. and just beating him. This was Eastern's last appearance in England. The stud-book records that he was sent to Belgium, and what became of him I do not know. He inherited his sire's small feet and weak fetlocks, and his owner had an idea that it often hurt him to stretch himself out, especially when the ground was at all hard. Galicia had, however, taken rank as the dam of a winner.

In 1905 Galicia gave birth to a bay colt by Isinglass who was called Carpathian, and showed sufficient promise to induce Mr. Fairie to put him into the New Stakes at Ascot, the Chesterfield at Newmarket, the Richmond at Goodwood, as also the Rous Memorial and the Molecomb, the Champagne at Doncaster, the Hopeful at Newmarket, the Middle Park and the Dewhurst, the two-year-old races, indeed, in which reputation is to be chiefly won. But Carpathian was never seen on a race-course. Meantime Galicia had visited Bay Ronald, a sire who certainly would not have been everyone's choice.
GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

There is one detail which I must not omit. At the time of writing the mare whose offspring have won most money in stakes is understood to be the Duke of Portland's Mowerina, the sire of Donovan, Semolina, and other winners, pressed by King Edward's Perdita II, dam of the three brothers Florizel II, Persimmon and Diamond Jubilee. Galicia is not far from the front, and in all probability her total will be considerably increased. It may be anticipated with no little confidence that she will presently be found to rank as the most remunerative mare who has ever figured in the Stud Book.
Bay Ronald was standing at Lordship Farm at a fee of 75 guineas. He had not produced anything of mark, and at this period the list of horses at the stud included many who looked tempting, though as regards most of them there was the question of inbreeding to be considered in dealing with a daughter of Galopin. Popular sires in 1905, however, besides the sons of St. Simon, included Ayrshire, by Hampton—Atalanta; Carbine, by Musket—Mersey; Cyllene, by Bonavista—Arcadia; Gallinule, by Isonomy—Moorhen; Ladas, by Hampton—Illuminata; Melton, by Master Kildare—Violet Melrose; Rightaway, by Wisdom—Vanish, all these at fees varying from 100 to 250 guineas, and it may be incidentally observed that Flying Fox, the son of Orme and Vampire, was priced at 600 guineas. Mr. Fairie made choice of Bay Ronald, how wisely the result was to show.

Horses are seldom judged without prejudice. For one of various reasons their critics have a disposition to regard them either with favour or disfavour, and a perfectly true account of almost any horse can be so tinged as to make him appear better or worse than he actually is. Thus as regards Bay Ronald it might be observed that during the four years he remained in training he ran in twenty-six races and won only five of them, the one by which he is best known having been a handicap, the City and Suburban; but no one pretends that such a summary would do the horse anything like justice. It is probable that when Bayardo first began to show what he was some doubts existed as to whether his career would continue brilliantly, simply because Bay Ronald was scarcely a sire from whom great things might have been expected. This is judging him superficially perhaps, by his not very brilliant performances whilst in training; but when his descent was considered it became evident that Bay Ronald might be capable of anything if he came near to transmitting the excellence of those from whom he was descended.

Bay Ronald, the property of Mr. Leonard Brassey, was a son of Hampton and Black Duchess. Hampton himself was a remarkable animal for reasons to which reference will presently be made. He in turn was the son of Lord Clifden, probably one of the best horses in the annals of the Turf, winner of a highly sensational Leger amongst other races. Lord Clifden was by Newminster, another St. Leger winner; Newminster by the famous Touchstone, yet another winner of the Doncaster classic; and on the dam's side Bay Ronald's descent is scarcely less distinguished, his dam having been Black Duchess, by Lord Falmouth's Galliard—a son of Galopin—winner of the Two Thousand Guineas of 1883, and of Black Corrie by Sterling.

I must by no means omit somewhat extended comment on Bay Ronald's sire, Hampton. In his early days it cannot be denied that he appeared to be altogether unworthy of his ancestors. He was somewhat small, though a decidedly good-looking horse, but that he did not take everyone's fancy is sufficiently proved by the fact that after winning a little Selling Race as a two-year-old no one would bid more than 150 guineas for him, at which modest price he was allowed to change hands. This was in 1874, and it seemed indscreetly ambitious to put him into the Metropolitan at Epsom next season, a mere plater, as it could not be incorrect to describe him. Carrying 6 st. 3 lb. he won in the style which his two-year-old efforts were very far from suggesting. His improvement was, indeed, astonishing, the fact being, however, that he was a natural stayer for whom no course appeared to be too long, and he was also possessed of sufficient speed to do what was necessary at the finish. Even as a four-year-old his merit was scarcely recognised, or so it would seem from the circumstance of his having had no more than 7 st. 10 lb. in the Goodwood Stakes. There was certainly a good entry that year; but nothing had a chance with Hampton. I well recollect the race, for a friend of mine, then Mr. Herbert Gardner, created afterwards Lord Burghclere, was also a great friend of the late Lord Ellesmere, Hampton’s owner, and induced me to back the horse. Handicappers soon began to perceive what he was. His weight in the Northumberland Plate next year, 1877, was 8 st. 12 lb., and he had no trouble in beating the fourteen opposed to him.

In his first season there had been no sort of ground to anticipate that Hampton would ever be able to win ordinary handicaps, whereas he proceeded to qualify as a Cup horse, and in 1877 added the Goodwood and Doncaster Cups to the list of his successes. In 1878 he did better still, taking the Epsom Gold Cup, a race which was then run over two miles, from the French horse Verneuil, who must have been one of the very best ever sent across the Channel. Verneuil was a magnificent specimen of the thoroughbred, and Hampton's fame naturally advanced after the Ascot Meeting; for here Verneuil won the Gold Vase on the Tuesday, the Gold Cup two days later, and was brought out again on the Friday for the Alexandra Plate, which he also secured. These triumphs of Hampton's were all accomplished in Lord Ellesmere's colours, and the once-despised plater became the sire of three Derby winners—Merry Hampton 1887, Ayrshire the following year, and Ladas 1894—and very nearly of a fourth who would have been victorious in the colours of his owner—Highland Chief. This colt was only beaten a neck in 1883 by Sir Frederick Johnstone's St. Blaise, and Webb, who rode Highland Chief, pulled up under the confident impression that he had actually won. When the trainer, Charles Archer, drew Webb's attention to the number of St. Blaise displayed above the judge's box, the jockey was persuaded that it must certainly have been hoisted by a mistake which would be speedily rectified. The Two Thousand winner Galliard, ridden by Fred Archer, was, it may be remarked, third. Hampton was also a winner over hurdles, a matter, however, little regarded by devotees of the sport which is called legitimate. He was a good second for the Grand

GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

International Hurdle Race at Croydon to Chandos, who possibly never had a superior in this business, which is in a great measure, no doubt, a question of knack. James Jewitt, who used to ride Chandos, has told me that the horse took his hurdles in his stride with a perfect ease which hardly conveyed to his jockey the impression that he was jumping at all. Excellence was, however, only to be expected from a son of Lord Clifden. I have mentioned this horse's sire Newminster; his dam was The Slave, a daughter of Melbourne, whose lop ears, and what was called the "Melbourne blaze," have marked so many of his stock.

Of late years the thoroughbred horse has enormously increased in value. In the sixties 5000 guineas was considered a huge sum to give for any animal, though for Lord Clifden as a two-year-old Lord St. Vincent is said to have paid over 6000 guineas. Lord Clifden began his career by winning the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, as several great horses have done, and after having been practically left at the post for the Champagne at Doncaster he won that as easily as he had taken the Epsom race. Another of his two-year-old exploits was to beat Lord Falmouth's good filly Queen Bertha, winner of the Oaks of 1863. There is little doubt that he was unfortunate in losing the Derby. Some time before the race he slipped up and injured himself, with the result that his preparation was seriously interrupted, a fact, I believe, not generally known. What happened on training grounds at that period was not common property, as it usually is to-day. There was in the stable an Irish horse called Bellman who greatly resembled Lord Clifden, and was mistaken for Lord St. Vincent's colt, the consequence being that work which Lord Clifden did not do, being at the time in his stable incapacitated, was attributed to him. He was decidedly backward in condition at Epsom, but nevertheless only failed by a head to beat Macaroni. There were good horses behind him—Rapid Rhone, The Ranger who won the first Grand Prix, Saccharometer, Blue Mantle, and Hospodar. Lord Clifden's St. Leger was one of the most sensational on record. He was ridden by John Osborne and left at the post, to all appearances hopelessly out of it. To have hurried him would doubtless have been fatal, but his accomplished jockey allowed him to make up his ground gradually, so much so that at the Red House it is said he was fully fifty lengths last, and odds of 50 to 1 were shouted against him. By degrees he pulled his way to the front, winning comfortably by half a length from Queen Bertha, Borealis third, in front of The Ranger and Blue Mantle amongst others. The grandsire of Bay Ronald was also the sire of no fewer than four Leger winners—Hawthornden, 1870; Wenlock, 1872; Petrarch, 1876; and Jannette, 1878.

Newminster must not be omitted from comment. He too won the Leger, in 1851, and besides Lord Clifden, sired classic winners in Musjid, who carried off the Derby for Sir Joseph Hawley in 1869, and Mr. Chaplin's Hermit, victorious at Epsom in 1867. Hermit became one of the most famous sires in Turf history, his stock including the classic winners St. Blaise, Shotover, Thebais, St. Marguerite, and Lonely. Peter, Tristan, Queen Adelaide and St. Louis were likewise by him, as was Friar's Balsam, unquestionably the best two-year-old of his season. Odds of 3 to 1 were laid on Friar's Balsam for the Two Thousand Guineas of 1888, but on the way to the post an abscess which had formed in his mouth, and in some mysterious way escaped the observation of his trainer, broke, and he was quite unable to do himself anything distantly approaching to justice. In the New Stakes at Ascot Friar's Balsam had cantered away from the Duke of Portland's Ayrshire, who won the Derby, having previously taken the Two Thousand which Friar's Balsam missed. It will be seen how many of this family were winners of the Leger. Touchstone was so in 1834, taking also the Doncaster Cup next year and the Ascot Cup, as also the Doncaster Cup again in 1836, and his Ascot victory he repeated in 1837. When it is considered what these horses did, respect for their descendant Bay Ronald cannot but increase.

Coming to Bay Ronald himself it has been said that he merely won five races in four years; but in order to give a fair view of him it must be pointed out that the tasks set him were frequently severe. His first appearance was made in the Stanley Stakes at the Epsom Summer Meeting of 1895, when as he started at 10 to 1 it may be assumed that not a great deal was expected of him. He nevertheless finished third to the late Colonel Harry M'Calmont's Devil-May-Care. Another colt belonging to Colonel M'Calmont—Cushendall—beat him out of a place at his next attempt, in the Windsor Castle Stakes at Ascot, and he just missed a place for the Lavant Stakes at Goodwood, behind the dead-heatners, Lord Houghton's Flitters—the then Lord Houghton, at present known as the Marquess of Crewe—and the Duke of Westminster's Omladina. It was hardly to be supposed that Bay

Ronald could have a chance for the Middle Park Plate, which went that year to Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's St. Frusquin, who beat Omladina by half a length, the favourite, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales' Persimmon, five lengths away, third; and St. Frusquin found little difficulty in giving Bay Ronald 10 lb. in the Dewhurst Plate, Mr. Leonard Brassey's colt finishing indeed last of the five.

It will be seen that big things had been asked of the colt, and so it continued next season. The ground was very hard in the spring of 1896, and for that reason Mr. Leopold de Rothschild did not bring out St. Frusquin for the Newmarket Stakes, he having already won the Column Produce Stakes and the Two Thousand. Galeazzo did duty for him, and shared favouritism with the Duke of Westminster's Labrador at 9 to 2, 5 to 1 being laid against the Duke of Devonshire's Balsamo, after whom in the market came Bay Ronald, 100 to 15. There were fifteen starters, and the fact of Bay Ronald being backed at this comparatively short price is evidence that he had wintered well. He ran, moreover, far from badly. Galeazzo had a neck the better of Balsamo, Bradwardine third, beaten three lengths, Bay Ronald fourth, in front of Labrador. There was some promise about this, but the colt continued to fly at the highest game, and next came out for the Derby, finishing fifth to Persimmon, who, as every one with any acquaintance with racing affairs is aware, beat St. Frusquin by a neck.

There is a proverb about knowing a man by the company he keeps, and to some extent horses may be judged after the same fashion. Bay Ronald at least kept excellent company, and if he did not always shine in it, peculiar brilliance is necessary in order to obtain distinction among the highest class. It is not impossible that there have been years when Bay Ronald might have made at any rate what is called "a bold bid" for the Derby if he had not actually won it. Supposing he had been one year older it is far from certain that Sir Visto would have beaten him, and had he been two years younger, which would have made him a three-year-old in 1898, he might quite possibly have beaten Jeddah. That at least is the estimate I form of him, though of course one cannot speak with any approach to confidence about the relative merit of horses who never came into opposition.

After Epsom Bay Ronald went to Ascot, and ran for the race which is called the Derby at that Meeting. There were only four starters, two of them on offer at odds of 20 to 1, indeed the race was evidently looked on as a good thing for the Duke of Westminster's Conroy, a son of Bend Or and Grace Conroy, for odds of 9 to 4 were laid on him—Bay Ronald, nevertheless, being quoted at 5 to 2. Conroy won, Bay Ronald beaten for second place three parts of a length by Mr. J. H. Houldsworth’s Positano, and it may be assumed that the jockeys rode out for places, as in this race the second receives £200, the third £100. This was not Bay Ronald at his best, at the same time something must have been thought of the performance, for on the Friday we find him second favourite at 7 to 2 for the Hardwicke Stakes. The absolute favourite was another colt from Kingsclere, a stable companion of Conroy, the Duke of Portland’s Shaddock, 11 to 8, and he won, Bay Ronald, though Shaddock was giving him 12 lb., finishing no nearer than fifth.

That race, it must freely be confessed, shows the horse in an unflattering light, but I have an idea that he was not seen in his true colours at this Ascot Meeting. At his next attempt he was engaged on a task which he could not be expected to fulfil. He was brought out for the Jockey Club Stakes at the Newmarket First October Meeting. At one time it had been supposed that Persimmon and St. Frusquin, unless the Leger had shown that one was unquestionably better than the other—a point which the Derby and the Princess of Wales's Stakes had left doubtful—would have met once more for this rich prize. St. Frusquin, however, had finally disappeared from active service on the race-course after winning the Eclipse Stakes. There was an idea that the late Colonel Harry M'Calmont's Knight of the Thistle, who was receiving 17 lb. from Persimmon, had some sort of chance, and the Duke of Westminster's Regret was considered to be not altogether hopeless, 100 to 12 being his price. Persimmon, however, 11 to 8 on, won by a couple of lengths from Sir Visto, Laveno filling the third place four lengths away. Some long prices were on offer, though there were only ten runners. Laveno and Utica stood at 66 to 1, Bay Ronald and The Lombard at 100 to 1, and 300 to 1 was to be had, at least according to the return, against a filly called Bride of the Sea, and also against Kirkconnel, notwithstanding that he had won the Two Thousand Guineas the previous year.

At length, however, Bay Ronald was to come to the front. He ran for the Lowther Stakes at the Second October Meeting with the following result:

Newmarket, 1896.

Betting.—13 to 8 against Earwig, 7 to 4 Rampion, 8 to 1 Bay Ronald, 100 to 12 Utica, and 10 to 1 Avilion. Won by three lengths; four lengths between second and third.

Earwig had been third to Persimmon and St. Frusquin at Epsom, beaten four lengths, as previously noted Bay Ronald was fifth, and here Earwig was trying to give him 6 lb. If not a great performance it was at any rate a creditable one, and next time it may be said that he did better.

Regret was always a disappointing animal.
That Bay Ronald had made a highly favourable

The two races which Bay Ronald won were worth £1585.

Throughout his career Bay Ronald was destined to meet the Duke of Devonshire's Balsamo on several occasions. Both had started for the Middle Park Plate, the only occasion on which the son of Friar's Balsam and Snood was seen as a two-year-old. As will be noted, they had come together in the Limekiln Stakes; in the Newmarket Stakes, when Balsamo was second, beaten a neck by Galeazzo, Bay Ronald fourth, some four lengths behind; and they met again in the City and Suburban of 1897, with which the four-year-old labours of both of them began. The Limekiln Stakes had seemed to settle the question between the two, though it was contradictory of some earlier form taken through Shaddock. This last named was a fairly good colt. As a three-year-old he had won six of his eight races, worth £5852, but in the Hardwicke Stakes, as already set forth, he had shown great superiority to Bay Ronald, whereas in the Prince of Wales’s Stakes at Ascot, Balsamo, in receipt of only 1 lb. from Shaddock, had run the Duke’s horse to a neck. Nevertheless Balsamo was distinctly preferred for the Epsom Spring Handicap.

Won by half a length; three lengths between second and third. Amandier and Villiers ran a dead heat for fourth place, beaten a short head.

The first and second thus came out as nearly as possible the same horse, and the running was certainly meritorious. La Sagesse, after winning the Oaks, had afforded evidence of continued well-being by winning the Derby Cup as a four-year-old, after just missing the Newmarket October Handicap, giving 29 lb. to the winner—a three-year-old, however—and failing by only half a length. Bay Ronald was next seen at Ascot, and in an important race which, it will be perceived, he was confidently expected to take.

Betting.—11 to 10 against Bay Ronald, 4 to 1 each the Novitiate colt and Minstrel, 10 to 1 each Lowly and Trawler. Won by two lengths; six lengths between second and third.

It may be said the opposition was not strong, for though Minstrel had won the Ascot Derby he had only been opposed by one very poor filly. After this Bay Ronald flew at high game.

The race came out, it will be noted, precisely in accordance with anticipation, Bay Ronald doing neither better nor worse than it seemed likely he would do. In the Champion Stakes at the Newmarket Second October Meeting he again encountered Velasquez. At Sandown he had been trying to give 9 lb. and had been beaten four lengths. At Newmarket, 2 to 1 being laid on Velasquez, Lord Rosebery's colt beat him by a couple of lengths, which might have been extended to four had there been any object. Though constantly set tasks which he could not possibly accomplish his reputation suffered little, and by the time the Cambridgeshire Handicap was made it was supposed that a considerable margin separated him from his old antagonist Balsamo, for Bay Ronald carried 8 st. 6 lb., the Duke of Devonshire's colt 7 st. 10 lb. Neither had anything to do with the finish, which was a question of heads between Comfrey, St. Cloud II, Sandía, and Cortegar. He was out once more as a four-year-old for the Liverpool Autumn Cup, not fancied, with 8 st. 3 lb., as the odds of 25 to 1 against him make plain.

Kilcock, the favourite, was, it will be seen, endeavouring to give Bay Ronald 20 lb. Knight of the Thistle was a horse whose name has occurred several times in previous pages. The difference between 100 to 12 and 8 to 1 is so small that Bay Ronald may be described as having practically started favourite, with Eager hardly less in demand. Bay Ronald, as already noted, had shown his liking for the course twelve months previously, and he won in good style from Newhaven II, who was imported from Australia by the present Sir William Cooper. This horse was destined to follow Bay Ronald’s example, for he won, carrying 9 st., the following season, as Mr. Leonard Brassey’s horse had done after being second at his first essay on the course. In the Epsom Cup, then run over the Derby course as the Coronation Cup is at present, Bay Ronald showed that there was certainly no mistake about hit victory at the Spring Meeting.

Betting.—11 to 10 on Winkfield's Pride, 2 to 1 against Newhaven II, and 10 to 1 each Champ de Mars and Bay Ronald. Won by two lengths; four lengths between second and third.

This was indeed doubtless his best performance, obviously better than in the Handicap, as here he was meeting Newhaven II at even weights instead of receiving 8 lb., as he had done five weeks previously. Here, too, was Winkfield's Pride, beating whom was certainly an achievement, for he was really a good horse. He had run second to Persimmon for the Ascot Cup; and, though very easily beaten, readily defeated in turn Mr. Hamar Bass's Love Wisely, and Limasol who had beaten Chelandry and others, including Goletta, in the Oaks. Among the runners for this last-named race was Galatia, a daughter of Galopin and Pamela, not of course to be confused with Galicia, who gives the title to this book. Winkfield’s Pride, besides winning the Lincolnshire Handicap with 8 st. 9 lb., had carried off the valuable Prix du Conseil Municipal in Paris in what was certainly a representative field, and the result was fully anticipated, moreover, as only 5 to 4 was laid against him, 5 to 1 against Omnium II and Masque, 10 to 1 against Elf, the three last-named having been considered good enough to send to England for the Gold Cup. A winner of the great Ascot race, Merman, was also in the Epsom Cup, in receipt, moreover, of 10 lb. from the three placed horses. After Epsom it is evident that Bay Ronald made excellent progress, the betting for the coveted Ascot trophy furnishing proof.

I have just been talking about the slight difference between 8 to 1 and 100 to 12; that between 100 to 30 and 7 to 2 is still less, a detail suggested by the betting on the Ascot Cup.

Bay Ronald cannot be said to have run well. The Rush, though he had won the Gold Vase, beating Newhaven II, who was third, by half a dozen lengths, was generally rated as a mere handicap horse, and much the same may be said of Sir Samuel Scott's History. It will be observed how vigorous was the French attempt on the Cup this year, four of the eight starters having come from across the Channel, Longbow one of them in spite of his English name. He was a son of The Bard and a mare called Old Bow.

The Epsom Cup was to be Bay Ronald's last victory. He tried again for the Hardwicke Stakes, which, as noted, he had taken the previous season.

Weight for age over a mile and a half in June between a three-year-old and a five-year-old is 20 lb., and Bay Ronald was giving 28 lb., so that without that advantage it may be assumed he would have won. It was not expected that he would beat Lord Rosebery's Velasquez in the Champion Stakes. The two ran at evens, odds of 11 to 4 on Lord Rosebery's colt, 11 to 4 against Bay Ronald, 200 to 1 against the other runner, a colt called Goblin, who was a very bad third, Velasquez winning by a length. Bay 61
RONALD tried again in the Lowther Stakes two days later, but it may be that his previous race had done him no good. He was last of three behind Prince Soltykoff's Ninus and the Duke of Westminster's Batt. Ninus was very useful, however, and Batt, a half-brother to Flying Fox by Sheen, had won his two previous races, as also the Payne Stakes in the Spring, had run second for the Derby, beaten only three parts of a length by Mr. Larnach's Jeddah, and had also been second to Velasquez for the Eclipse Stakes. Mr. Leonard Brassey's horse was to make one final appearance. This was in the Jockey Club Cup.

It may be presumed that Bay Ronald was not so good a stayer as the other two; indeed this may be accepted as beyond question, the Ascot Cup confirming it in the case of The Rush, and as for Merman, a comparison of this Jockey Club Cup with the Epsom Cup tells its own tale.

Bay Ronald retired to the Preston Stud Farm at Aylesford in Kent, and stood at a fee of 25 guineas in the year 1900. To sum up his performances, as a two-year-old he was out five times without success; as a three-year-old he won two stakes in eight attempts, of the value of £1585; his solitary win as a four-year-old in six attempts yielded £2378, and his two five-year-old races produced £2480. Thus altogether Bay Ronald ran twenty-six times, winning five races worth £6443. The record is far from being a great one.

It is always particularly interesting to have an owner's account of his horse, and Major Leonard Brassey, though busily engaged on duty with the Northamptonshire Yeomanry at the time when I begged him to give me some account of his horse, most kindly sent the following sketch:

BAY RONALD

Bay Ronald by Hampton—Black Duchess was bred in 1893 by Mr. T. Phillips at the Leybourne Grange Stud, and was sent up for sale at Doncaster in 1894 with Mr. Phillips' other yearlings. I recollect my trainer, Tom Jennings, jun., writing to me shortly after the Doncaster Meeting to say that he had seen a nice yearling of Mr. Phillips' there which had failed to fetch the reserve price of 500 guineas. Tom Jennings suggested that as I lived close to Leybourne Grange I might like to go over and see the colt. This I did, with the result that Bay Ronald became my property.

I bought Black Duchess, the dam of Bay Ronald, at the sale at the Second October Meeting, 1896, curiously enough but a few hours before Bay Ronald won his first race, the Lowther Stakes. About the same time I remember Mr. M. Gurry offering to sell me for £200 a half-sister to Bay Ronald, Black Cherry, by Bendigo—Black Duchess. This I declined, but Colonel W. Hall Walker—with better judgment—purchased this mare, and she became the dam of Black Arrow, Cherry Lass (winner of the Oaks), Jean's Folly, and therefore the grand-dam of Night Hawk, winner of the St. Leger of 1913. As a two-year-old Bay Ronald was not of much account, nor indeed did he "come to hand" before the latter part of his three-year-old career, when he won the Lowther Stakes and Limekiln Stakes at Newmarket. He began his four-year-old season by running second to Balsamo in the City and Suburban, giving 3 lb. I always look upon this as perhaps the most unlucky race of my Turf career. As after events proved, Bay Ronald was an exceptionally good horse on the Epsom Course. He was very well on the day, and he should certainly have beaten Balsamo. Bay Ronald subsequently won the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, but could only run third to Persimmon and Velasquez in the Eclipse Stakes, and second to Velasquez in the Champion Stakes at Newmarket.

As a five-year-old Bay Ronald won the City and Suburban and the Epsom Cup, beating Newhaven II and Winkfield's Pride. He was then trained for the Ascot Gold Cup, in which he ran unplaced. My action in this matter was scarcely judicious. The horse never showed ability to stay more than a mile and a half, and a severe preparation for the Cup, followed by the race on hard ground, in all probability had a permanently adverse effect. I think Bay Ronald was never afterwards in the form he was when he so easily won the Epsom Cup.

On the day following the Gold Cup he ran second to Collar in the Hardwicke Stakes. After his struggle the previous day on very hard ground I do not think this can be taken as Bay Ronald's true form. Collar had won 65 the Trial Stakes on the first day of the Ascot Meeting, and John Porter sent the horse back to Kingsclere on the Wednesday, not intending to bring him out again at the Meeting. On the Thursday evening, realising that horses which had run for the Gold Cup would probably not be at their best on the following day, and that the remainder of the opposition was not likely to be strong, Porter telegraphed for Collar to be sent back to Ascot, with the result that he won the nice stake of £2,242 for the Duke of Westminster.

There is little to relate of Bay Ronald's subsequent performances on the Turf, except that Tom Jennings—by no means one of the "Cocksure Brigade"—was rather confident that he would win the Goodwood Cup of that year. Owing to a family bereavement the day before the race I did not run him.

Though Bay Ronald achieved a fair amount of success on the racecourse one cannot describe him as having been quite a first-class racehorse. His form was certainly somewhat variable, this being accounted for, I think, by the fact that his constitution as a young horse was not of a very robust character, and strong preparations for long-distance races may have rather taken the steel out of him later on.
AND HER OFFSPRING

Bay Ronald with very limited opportunities was a distinct success at the Stud. His most conspicuous sons are Bayardo, Dark Ronald, and Macdonald II, the latter a first-class racehorse and a most successful stallion in France.

One talks of “the glorious uncertainty” of the Turf. The glorious uncertainty of breeding racehorses is hardly less. At the December sales at Newmarket in 1897 I recollect that Prince Pierre d’Arenberg and the Comte de Pourtales came round Tom Jennings’ stables one evening. The former had bought at the sales that day a mare called Marie, and was doubtful what he should do with her. I suggested that he might send her to Bay Ronald, who was just about to commence Stud duties. This was done, and Macdonald II was the result.

I sold Bay Ronald for £5000 to go to France, unfortunately before Bayardo and Dark Ronald appeared upon the scene. He did not, however, live long to bring profit to his new owners or further fame to himself, as he died in 1905. Bay Ronald grew into a beautiful and most bloodlike stallion, with a very perfect head and neck.

So Major Leonard Brassey most kindly wrote. To continue my own narrative, it was not long before Bay Ronald began to make his mark at the Stud. In 1902 when his offspring first ran five of them won ten races worth £3789, Rondeau securing five of these, and Arabi, a son of his owner's Merry Miser, taking the Great Foal Plate (£835) at Lingfield, and the Astley Stakes (£690) at Lewes, besides being placed in five of his other eight races. In the Bedford Stakes at the Newmarket Second July Arabi was second to Rock Sand, and on the occasion of his first appearance, in the Sandown Park Stud Produce Stakes, third to Our Lassie, who was to win the Oaks next year, and to Mr. Arthur James's good horse, Rabelais, who has been so brilliantly successful at the Stud in France. A result of all this was the increase of Bay Ronald's fee to 100 guineas, and a note in the record states that he was full for 1904, Rondeau having continued to win in 1903, Merryman and Wild Oats also adding to his reputation; in all his five young ones won twelve races worth £6191. Merryman, who after a first appearance in the Brocklesby took three consecutive races worth £2424, was an own brother to Arabi. In 1904 there was no new horse of note among his seven winners (of twelve races worth £3560). Merryman was out three times without success, and in 1905 there was a drop, six horses winning ten races of small value, the whole amounting to only £1556.

"Mr. Fairie's" House on The Several at Newmarket

Mr. Fairie, however, had determined to send Galicia to the horse in 1905, though he cannot have been much gratified with Bay Ronald's record for the season. Arabi won four little races worth £799, an indifferent colt called Galhampton just got home by a neck for a Plate worth £262, and Ronaldo took a couple of minor stakes worth £220. Thus seven races worth £1281 was the total. In 1905 the fee had been reduced to 75 guineas. The year 1907 produced only Dark Ronald of any real note, though Rousay won thrice and was second in four of his other five races. Dark Ronald only appeared on two occasions, the first time successfully in the Hurst Park Foal Plate, which he won, though only by a head, from a colt called Quimpert, who was giving him 3 lb.; his second attempt was in the Great Foal Plate at Lingfield, when a remarkably speedy animal called Little Flutter, in receipt of 15 lb., beat him three lengths, odds of 6 to 1 being laid on the winner.

Bay Ronald was on the up grade; seven of his get won twelve races worth £3660; but there seemed no reason to assume that such brilliant distinction as that which he achieved was in store for him, that he was going to rise speedily to eminence among sires; for owing to Bayardo he took his place at the end of the 1908 season third in the list, following Persimmon and St. Frusquin, in front of Gallinule, St. Simon, Chaleureux—who, of course, owed his position to the amazing victories of Signorinetta—and Desmond.

Bayardo.
From the painting by A. C. Havell.
A number of good horses have made their first appearance in the New Stakes at Ascot, and Bayardo's name figures among them. His trial at Manton on the 9th of June by no means strikes one as overwhelming. The distance was five furlongs.

Won easily by six lengths; a length between second and third.

Of course, it was something to beat a three-year-old at even weights; but Seedcake had run in half a dozen races prior to this gallop without ever having been placed, three as a two-year-old, three in 1908, and in the Trial Stakes with which this Ascot Meeting opened he was last. Probably he was a better horse at home than out.

Four others were preferred to Bayardo in the

New Stakes, which is on the whole not strange. There was a strong favourite at 6 to 4 in Mr. (as he then was) William Cooper's Perola, ridden by Maher. She had easily carried off the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, fourth in which race had been a colt of Lord Rosebery's called Perdiccas. At Epsom Perdiccas had been giving Perola 10 lb., he being penalised for two successes. In the New Stakes he had 7 lb. the better of the weights with the filly, and it was thought that so great a variation would change the result. Mr. J. B. Joel's Sunflower II was backed on the strength of private reputation. But the race was never in doubt.

Writing at the time under the signature "Rapier" in the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, my comment on the race was: "It soon became evident that Manton shelters the best colt of the season out so far," and there was no occasion to amend the last three words when the season was over. "Mr. Fairie has had some horses of high class," I continued, "and he tells me he thinks this undoubtedly the best he has ever owned."

There could not well have been a more promising start, and when Bayardo came out again for the National Breeders' Produce Stakes at Sandown, the most valuable two-year-old prize in existence, he was favourite as a matter of course.

The unfortunate thing about this race was the reputation it earned for the second, Lord Howard de Walden's Excellenza colt, afterwards named Glasgerion; for as Bayardo's fame grew so did opinion as to what might be accomplished by the animal who had run him to a length. That, however, is a matter which does not come into the present story. It is not by any means always that the best-looking horse is the best performer. Bayardo, however, was full of quality, and admiration for him steadily increased. There is a progression of stakes, as it may be called, in which one expects to find the very best two-year-olds, and the Richmond at Goodwood is one of them. Great names appear in the record of this event—Jannette, Wheel of Fortune, Bend Or, Dutch Oven, Friar's Balsam, Orme, Persimmon, and others; and Bayardo won it at his leisure. No doubt was entertained of the result, but at the same time not a little was thought of Sir Daniel Cooper's Vivid, who, it will be seen, was receiving 12 lb. more than sex allowance.

more that year and only twice as a three-year-old, when it became unmistakably clear that it was useless to keep her in training. Thus he had run seven times and never been extended.

From the two-year-olds of 1908 it will be realised that Bayardo stood out, and as a matter of course he headed the Free Handicap for horses of his age. It naturally followed that he was a pronounced winter favourite for the Derby, and his position in this respect would have strengthened greatly but for the improvement which had taken place in King Edward's Minoru, not Sandringham-bred, as his other classic winners, Persimmon and his younger brother Diamond Jubilee, had been, but a son of Cyllene and Mother Seigel leased from Colonel Hall Walker, and born at the Tully Stud in Ireland.

Minoru had been put in the Free Handicap at 7 st. 6 lb., in receipt of 22 lb. from Bayardo, and that he could have improved sufficiently to be a source of danger to Mr. Fairie's colt it was impossible to suppose prior to the time when racing started in 1909. Minoru then went to Newbury to run for the Greenham Stakes, and he had done so well under the care of Richard Marsh at Egerton House that he was backed at 9 to 2, Lord Carnarvon’s Valens a favourite on whom slight odds were laid, supported with more confidence as Minoru had to give him 5 lb. Visitors were, however, gratified by the spectacle of the success of the Royal colours. Minoru beat Valens a length and a half, and an idea sprung up that he might have an outside chance for the classics. This suggestion was chiefly advanced, however, by those who thought it would be a good thing for racing if the King won another Derby, particularly as no reigning King of England had done so in the history of the race. That Minoru could beat Bayardo few people seriously imagined, and when the Two Thousand came round odds of 13 to 8 were laid on the son of Bay Ronald, 4 to 1 against Minoru. Bayardo was by no means at his best. Of that there could be no question. It was thought, nevertheless, that even when backward in condition he could at any rate beat the lot opposed to him. Indeed, with the exception of Minoru, as will be seen from the report of the race, no danger was apprehended.

Layers of odds knew their fate when the horses passed the Bushes, feeling convinced nevertheless that this could not be the real Bayardo. He ran without dash, and though his defeat was attributed to unreadiness a vague suspicion arose that he might not be the horse he had shown himself the previous season. This notion so far strengthened as time went on as to depose him from his position of favourite for the Derby. Glowing accounts of the manner in which Minoru had been thriving came from Newmarket, and at the Turf headquarters another formidable rival had arisen in Mr. Louis Winans's Sir Martin, a son of Ogden and Lady Sterling, whom his owner had imported from the United States.

Sir Martin was trained by Joseph Cannon at Lordship Farm, and early in the year I had been down to have a look at him, to find a colt lacking in quality, but nevertheless striking one as a racehorse. He was introduced to the course in a Welter Handicap at the Newmarket Second Spring Meeting on the 12th of May, exactly a fortnight before the Derby, and the class in this Handicap not being good, three-year-old as Sir Martin was, 9 st. 10 lb. was put on his back, the lowest weight being 7 st. Dusky Slave, a four-year-old filly belonging to Mr. J. B. Leigh, was favourite, carrying 7 st. 9 lb., and Sir Martin, giving 29 lb. and the year, equivalent to another stone having regard to sex allowance, won very easily by a length and a half, which might have been considerably increased.

A result of this was that the American colt started actually favourite for the Derby. He and Minoru were so nearly on the same mark that if a regular frequenter of the racecourse had been asked just prior to the start what was favourite he would have been as likely to mention one as the other. Admirers of Bayardo had, nevertheless, lost little of their confidence, many of them had lost none, and were delighted at the possibility of obtaining odds of 9 to 2. The fact that Maher was riding much gratified a number of those who were interested in Mr. Fairie's colt, but was not regarded by everyone as immensely in Bayardo's favour. The American jockey had previously won the Derby thrice in four years—on Sir James Miller's Rock Sand in 1903, Lord Rosebery's Cicero in 1905, Major Eustace Loder's Spearmint in 1906, and in 1906 he had also won the Oaks on Lord Derby's Keystone II. Notwithstanding these victories, however, his percentage of successes at Epsom had been singularly low in comparison with the proportion of his victories on other courses, notably perhaps at Newmarket.

Descending the hill towards Tattenham Corner Sir Martin fell. He was almost in front at the time, and what effect the accident had on the animals who were following him can never be precisely ascertained. Spectators who were near the scene of the mishap varied greatly in their accounts of it, the jockeys who rode in the race told contradictory stories, as is much more the rule than the exception in such cases, and from the neighbourhood of the winning-post it was impossible to make out, even approximately, what had occurred. I watched the race from the top of the Club stand, a good place for seeing—when other people's heads and hats do not obscure the view. I observed the wearer of Mr. Winans's black, white, and red hoops suddenly come to the ground, and some of the other runners being pulled out to avoid the fallen horse and jockey. Maher roughly calculated that he lost sixteen lengths. So far as I could make out Minoru near the rails escaped interference, and was fortunate in finding a clear course, as was also the case with Mr. Walter Raphael's Louviers.

Minoru, it may be remarked, had been drawn No. 1 on the rails, and his jockey kept him on the inside. When once Tattenham Corner had been rounded, however, four or five appeared to be in it, Bayardo not far behind, and I gazed with confidence to see him assert his old superiority. The inference is that he had been thrown out of his stride and was unable to recover it sufficiently to do himself justice. A hundred yards from home the race seemed to have resolved itself into a fight between Minoru and Louviers, though it was not quite certain that William the Fourth or Valens might not get up, and a very faint hope that Bayardo might do so still lingered. It was not to be, however. The bearers of the Royal purple and scarlet, and of the dark blue, scarlet hooped sleeves, flashed past the post as nearly as possible in a line, so much so that no one could say who had won, or whether, indeed, this was not a third instance of a dead heat for the Derby since the race was started in 1780—the two previous ones having been between the Duke of Rutland's Cadland and Mr. E. Petre's The Colonel in 1828, Sir John Willoughby's Harvester and Mr. J. Hammond's St. Gatien in 1884. The scene of enthusiasm which followed the hoisting of the King's number need not be described. It is sufficient to say that Bayardo's subsequent running appeared most distinctly to prove that the Derby of 1909 was not won by the best horse.

Won by a short head; half a length second and third. Sir Martin fell.

Bayardo went on to Ascot, and there his friends had an excellent opportunity of backing him for the Prince of Wales's Stakes, for bookmakers accepted short odds about the colt. He had to give 21 lb. to a filly called Verne, a daughter of Bill of Portland and La Vierge, who had made her first appearance in the Oaks—never having run as a two-year-old—and had finished third. It seemed to be supposed that she had a chance, but as a matter of fact she never won a race of any kind, and the three parts of a length by which Bayardo beat the Duke of Portland’s Cattaro might have been largely extended.

Bayardo’s only other engagement at Ascot was for the St. James’s Palace Stakes, and he was not brought out, Minoru being left to deal with a couple of opponents, as he did without difficulty; and it is to be suspected that Bayardo’s absence here accounted for his price when he started ten days later for the Sandring-

AND HER OFFSPRING

That Verney should have shared second favouritism with Bayardo is explained by the weights, for 38 lb. is a desperate handicap, but it will be seen that Bayardo and Louviers carried the same burden, and the fact that the Derby form was wrong had not yet been recognised. A clearer perception of the real state of the case had arisen before the Eclipse Stakes. Your Majesty was a Leger winner, indeed he had won four of the five races for which he had started the previous season, and had been favourite for the Princess of Wales's Stakes at Newmarket, for which he had been beaten by Dark Ronald, a colt of whom a vast deal was thought. At Sandown the race was never in any sort of doubt, though Bayardo's jockey seemed to take particular pains to keep him behind the leaders until the moment for making his effort had arrived.

Thenceforth Bayardo's position was established, and how little had come to be thought of the Derby form by the time the Hurst Park Meeting was held in July the Duchess of York Plate afforded unmistakable evidence.

Valens had been doing distinctly well since the Derby. He had won the Whitsuntide Plate at the previous Hurst Park Meeting, the Home-bred Three-Year-Old Cup at Gatwick with odds of 100 to 6 on him, and had been second for the Hardwicke, he, as a three-year-old, giving the four-year-old Primer 4 lb. and running him to half a length.

After the Duchess of York Plate on the 24th July, Bayardo was trained for the Leger, in which the struggle between him and Minoru was to be renewed. Richard Marsh was quite satisfied with Minoru's prospects, entirely as the Derby form had been upset; for at Epsom Minoru had beaten Valens scarcely a length and what had happened when Valens met Bayardo had been seen.

I may add my brief comment, written at the time in the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News:

Marsh has seen so much of the ups and downs of racing that he rarely ventures to be anything like sanguine. He evidently did, however, most firmly believe that Minoru would, indeed that he must, win the Leger. He had never before got the King's colt quite so well, Minoru had not for a day been sick or sorry, had apparently come on, stayed well, fully retained his action, everything was in his favour. "I know I have to meet a good one in Bayardo," he remarked to me, "but I can tell you that Bayardo has to meet a good one in mine!" Well! Bayardo won, as I thought he would, or rather not quite as I thought he would, for I did think he would have to stretch himself out to beat Minoru, and no stretching was required. But for the facts that I had talked for a long time to Marsh on the morning of the race, knew that Minoru was at his very best, and had the evidence of my eyes to confirm it so far as looking goes—though Marsh's opinion was more than ample—I should have suspected that all could not have been well with Minoru, so badly did he run. Not for a moment did he suggest the possibility of success, and we gazed in amazement when for a few moments it really appeared as if Mirador and Valens had it between them. Could it be that one more 40 to 1 chance was to win? As we wondered, Maher brought up Bayardo, and the race was over. Three strides did it. The others could not live with him for two seconds when it came to racing. Mr. Fairie was escorted by a bevy of friends to the paddock, and though naturally the failure of Minoru disappointed a multitude of people, the cheers which welcomed back Bayardo were hearty. Probably it was Lemberg's defeat that raised doubts with regard to his brother, for on Wednesday afternoon, 11 to 8 having been laid on Bayardo the day before, a shade of odds against him was obtainable, and at one time 6 to 4 was taken about Minoru. Why the King's colt ran so badly is inconceivable.

There may be some excuse for Minoru. He only won a single race afterwards, and suffered from an affection of the eyes which not improbably influenced his general health. He never looked like winning; nor did Bayardo ever look like being beaten. So little had the Leger taken out of him that it was thought he might just as well be produced to run for the Doncaster Stakes on the Friday, and this proved a mere exercise canter.

Betting.—9 to 4 on Bayardo, 5 to 1 against Dean Swift, 11 to 2 White Eagle. Won by a neck; length second and third.

Dean Swift had proved himself something better than a handicap horse, and it was no discredit to Bayardo that he should not have absolutely cantered away from the dual winner of the City and Suburban. In the Lowther Stakes on the Thursday it will be perceived how hopeless White Eagle's chance was, for here he was trying to give Bayardo 12 lb., and in the Champion Stakes Bayardo had beaten him in receipt of just half as much.

That Bayardo had been so liberally engaged proved fortunate. He was in eighteen races as a three-year-old, and started for no fewer than thirteen of them. On the 21st of October he reappeared at Sandown on the Eclipse Stakes course for the Sandown Foal Stakes, his third essay, it will be perceived, over this mile and a quarter, he having taken the Sandringham Foal Stakes at the Summer Meeting as recorded, and he won very easily, though the verdict was the length and a half. That seemed to be the distance which Maher usually thought sufficient. It was by a length and a half that he had won the Lowther Stakes, much about the same distance in the Doncaster Stakes, a length and a half again in the Leger, rather more—two lengths—in the Duchess of York Plate and in the Eclipse, the familiar length and a half again in the Sandringham Foal Stakes.

Throughout the winter Bayardo went on in the right way, his owner’s objective being the Ascot Cup. He was ready, however, by the Craven Meeting, and fulfilled his engagement in the Fiftieth Newmarket Biennial. It was hardly supposed to be a race, but it will be seen that the jockey was contented to win by a sufficient, though not extensive, margin.

horse than he was in fact, and a good deal of money was therefore lost on him, for he never won afterwards under Jockey Club Rules, though when put to jumping he was fairly successful in carrying off minor stakes.

Bayardo went on to Chester to run for the Vase, which during the last few years has usually attracted a few good animals, and here there was a sensational finish.

Betting.—5 to 1 on Bayardo, 10 to 1 against William the Fourth, 100 to 6 Santa Fina. Won by a head; three-quarters length second and third.

William the Fourth had not been out since the previous Ascot, when he won the Ascot Derby from three moderate opponents. He had, however, been doing well under the charge of Mr. Gwyn Saunders-Davies at Michel Grove, and if the quotation of the betting is accurate some people were willing to take 10 to 1 against him, which seemed a rash proceeding before the start. William the Fourth only ran once afterwards, and during the three seasons he was in training only won the single race at Ascot. Of course, seeing how near he was in the Derby, his friends protested that he "ought to have won" it. Such protestations are common, though at the same time it must be admitted that of late years the Derby has on several occasions been won by horses who could not have been the best in the race.

Bayardo, so far from frightening away rivals in the Gold Cup, was one of the largest field which had ever started for that trophy since the contest for it was originated in 1807. It is very seldom in its history that the starters have run into double figures. The Marquis of Hastings' Lecturer was one of ten in 1867, and it was not until 1902, William the Third's year, when eleven went to the post, that double figures were again reached. The reason is obvious: so very few horses have any pretensions to win, and their owners do not consider it worth while to submit them to the ordeal of the necessarily severe preparation for a hopeless task.

In 1910, however, Bayardo was one of a field of thirteen. In the two previous years there had been half a dozen starters, and there was the same number the year following. Considering Bayardo's record the ring seems to have been extraordinary liberal in laying 7 to 4 against him. This was due to the fact that doubts must always exist as to the ability of a horse to last two miles and a half until he has proved his ability to do so, though Alec Taylor, who had charge of Bayardo, has been strikingly successful in training the winners of long-distance races—as his father was before him—and his confidence in the son of Bay Ronald was supreme. That Mr. Louis Winans's Sir Martin should have been backed at 9 to 2 must be considered strange, for Joseph Cannon did not appear to be entirely satisfied that the American colt would stay, as he proved quite unable to do, and I suspect that he never recovered from the effect of his exertions. It is rather the exception for an American-bred horse to stay. Sir Martin, however, had been tried, in the opinion of his experienced trainer, good enough to win the Derby, and that there was no mistake about the trial was sufficiently demonstrated by the fact of his having had little difficulty in beating so good a horse as Bachelor's Double, to say nothing of Louviers who had lost the Derby by only a head, in the Coronation Cup at Epsom over the Derby course. Louviers finished nearly six lengths behind Sir Martin in the Epsom race, Batchelor's Double beaten a length and a half.

Few years pass in which some French owners do not send over in the hope of winning the Gold Cup, and their efforts have on various occasions been successful—with Maxim II in 1903, Elf II in 1898, Verneuil in 1878, Boiard in 1874, Henry in 1872, Mortemer in 1871, and Gladiateur in 1866. Two French horses arrived to run against Bayardo, one with the disagreeable name of Sea Sick II, a colt who had much distinguished himself in his own country, and Aveu, of whom much less was thought. Sea Sick II, a son of Elf II whose name has just been mentioned, had won half a dozen races in France in eight attempts as a three-year-old, and had been second for the valuable Prix du Président de la République, worth nearly £5000. He was a great stayer. One of his successes had been in the Prix de Longchamps, two miles and a furlong, another in the Prix de Chantilly over a slightly longer course, a third, the Prix Gladiateur, a few yards short of four miles. That he had retained his form was shown by a couple of victories gained shortly before his visit to Ascot, and it may be noted that on his return to France, in his first essay there, he took the Prix de Longchamps for the second time. He was, indeed, strongly fancied for the Cup at Ascot.

Bayardo’s victory was gained in the most brilliant and convincing fashion. When Maher asked him to leave his horses he came to the front and cantered home without the semblance of effort. This finish for the Ascot Cup dwells in the memory, and, great as Bayardo’s reputation was, the race vastly raised and strengthened it. Only a great horse could win as he did.

I may perhaps be allowed to reproduce the description I wrote of the event at the time:

I am inclined to fancy that Bayardo astonished everybody last week. Of course, Mr. Fairie has 105 always had a tremendous opinion of his horse, and Alec Taylor has seen him every day for years past. They must have known something like what he was; but nothing that happens on a horse's own training ground can demonstrate just what he will do in the course of a race for the Ascot Cup against a good representative field. That is the point—the "good representative field." At home perhaps the Cup horse gallops with a couple of others, and there is something to jump in and lead him for the last mile. You never get the conditions in private that you get in public, and that is why I doubt whether anybody could be confident Bayardo had it in him to give the electrifying exhibition which will make his victory memorable. Why Maher has ridden him in the style with which we were familiar before Ascot it is utterly impossible to guess. On the morning of the Cup Day an owner who is among the very best judges of horses and racing that I ever met, and who, moreover, happens to be particularly well acquainted with the Manton stable, replied to my question whether he intended to back Bayardo with an unhesitating negative, and he added, "I will never back a horse that is not genuine for an Ascot Cup!" That was the impression of Bayardo that he entertained. It may be that all Maher's wins on

Bayardo have been miracles of unexampled genius in the way of jockeyship. The effect they have had is that just indicated. He has always striven to keep the colt behind others, and the well-nigh universally accepted explanation was that he "did not want to let Bayardo see what he had to do." There can be no sort of doubt that if any accident had prevented Bayardo from running for the Cup he would have left the Turf under a strong suspicion of being a rogue, or at least of having a decided tendency to roguishness, and this because of the way in which Maher has been pleased to ride him.

Now we all know how utterly unjust such a suspicion would be. No horse that ever trod on racing plates could have given a more gallant and impressive exhibition. The days have long since passed when French horses were lightly esteemed, and a particularly accomplished trainer's opinion with regard to Sea Sick II was that he would prove invincible. He stays, he has speed, he had never been so well in his life. He was genuine, and in France they knew, or thought they knew, all about Bayardo's suspected inclination to turn it up if he saw a long stretch of galloping ground in front of him. It has now been proved that he has not this inclination; but why on earth has Maher apparently been so careful to persuade us that he has had? I am quite certain that the suspicion would have influenced his stud prospects. However, there was Sea Sick to beat, and was there not also Sir Martin? I have often commented on the fact that American horses do not stay. That is now a commonplace. But Americans who knew most about Sir Martin were persuaded that he was an exception. Many people, on the ground that American horses do not stay, would not back him for the Coronation Cup. He won over that mile and a half course in a canter, which certainly suggested that he could have gone on a much longer way. Of course, it is very easy to declare that a son of Ogden was sure not to last over the Ascot Cup course; but this absurdly obvious circumstance was not realised till everyone had seen Sir Martin tailed off. Doubtless a mile and a half at Epsom and two miles and a half at Ascot are different things; nevertheless, in the face of Bayardo and of Sea Sick, a great many men, not necessarily all fools, took 4 to 1 about Sir Martin; and a good many writers about racing, not congenital idiots, expounded the opinion that his chance was a great one. A rank non-stayer would not have won the Coronation Cup without an effort.

Sir Martin at home had galloped the Cup distance unfalteringly; but that is the point discussed above—to do this at home is one thing, to do it in a veritable Cup race is another. Bachelor's Double, on the other hand, had been trained for the Hunt Cup mile, and simply for this reason it was hard to imagine that he could stay sufficiently well to be dangerous. If he should be trained for the Gold Cup next year, it is far from unlikely that he may win it; but it would require an equine marvel to carry off this Cup without a preparation, and it is most astonishing that he should have got where he did. Nobody out of the William the Fourth stable credited him with being nearly good enough, though his owner's refusal to pick up the Triennial on Tuesday, which the colt could not have missed, betokened faith. It is not the first time that the substance has been lost for the sake of the shadow. Men who, as it now appears, should have been wiser, backed Buckwheat both ways. He was "a better horse than people thought," I was assured. Beyond these it seemed quite needless to look. Pure Gem could not possibly be regarded as a Cup horse, nor could Royal Realm, though it is open to those with a fancy for supporting outsiders to add, "Nor could Bomba last year, or Throwaway, who was better than Bomba, surely, a few years before." This would be a retort rather difficult to answer effectively; for if you replied, "That sort of thing is not likely to happen again," there was the answer, "It was not in the least likely to happen last year; only it did!"

It is rather quaint to see a horse conscientiously making running for a stable companion to whom the pacemaker's efforts are not of the remotest service. Southanan performed this duty for William the Fourth, who could not take the least advantage of it; and it may be incidentally remarked that placing William the Fourth to win races will not be easy, for he is likely to find something to beat him in the Cups, and as for a handicap, his having run Bayardo to a head at 2 lb. will ensure him plenty of poundage. I do not know if it is true that he has broken down. Sea Sick's jockey was not afraid to make use of him, and when Southanan retired, having had enough of it, the French horse went on. Unless Bayardo could really stay (my friend the good judge mentioned above finally backed him because he looked so beautiful), the race must go to France; O'Neill was bent on running them out of it if it was to be done; and meantime, where were Bayardo and Sir Martin? Maher had been much nearer last than first for half the journey, and it was not till about a mile from home that somebody near me remarked, "Bayardo is going up a bit." He had improved his position and was fifth or sixth—which seems an odd thing to write of a race for an Ascot Cup, the average number of runners being about four. Then, some six furlongs from home, Bayardo shot out in a fashion which can only be described as phenomenal. Maher had won in half a dozen strides. Of course, there was a good distance still to go, but practically the race was over. Bayardo led round the bend, sweeping on with effortless ease. Sea Sick was by no means done with. He still galloped steadily on without the least sign of flagging; Bachelor's Double evoked profound amazement by sticking resolutely to the Frenchman, and for the matter of that we had seen on Wednesday what speed the Irishman possessed.

But their endeavours to live with Bayardo were really absurd. It had been asked whether he could stay. Here he was, after going over two miles in time which misses the Cup record by the fraction of a second, striding out as freely and freshly as if the race were just beginning. But oh! why has Maher done such cruel injustice to the horse and allowed such a totally false view of him to gain currency? His refusals to go to the post at Newmarket, more than once obliging his jockey to take him round by the back of the stands, were put down to an idea that he "did not like racing." Last year we saw how Maher jammed him into the heels of other horses. He looked so magnificent at Ascot that it seemed folly to back anything else to beat him, and I had previously expressed a conviction that he would win for reasons which I gave—a defeat would do him much more harm than a victory (an ordinary win, not such a splendid achievement as we witnessed) would do him good, and he would never be allowed to start unless no doubt were felt about his being at his best and certainly able to get the course. That it is excessively difficult to make sure of this last fact at home I have admitted; but in that respect Alec Taylor seems to get at the truth as his father did before him. The record of Manton in long-distance races has been extraordinarily good, and this season the Chester Cup, Ascot Stakes, the Northumberland Plate, and above all the Gold Cup, have to be added to the long list. It is certain that Bayardo is now regarded in a way vastly different from that which obtained before Ascot. "I didn't quite like the style in which he won his race at Newmarket," some one said to me in the paddock on Thursday, just before the Cup. "Why, surely he beat Great Peter easily enough?" I replied; and his answer was a hesitating "Yes—I suppose he did."

The Chester race did want a deal of explaining away. Every one will now most readily accord Bayardo a place among the very best known in the history of the Turf.

So I wrote when the impression was fresh on me, and now to resume once more.

Bayardo's next engagement was in the Dullingham Plate at the Newmarket Second July Meeting, and Mr. Fairie thought that he might as well annex it, as he did with sufficient ease.

He was not sent to Liverpool for the Atlantic Stakes in which he had been engaged, it being settled that his next race should be the Goodwood Cup; and this was a tragedy. It is natural that the history of racing should contain few instances of horses who have been beaten with odds of 20 to 1 on them. In such a case, as a matter of course, the affair looks an absolutely foregone conclusion; on the other hand, what is called the "glorious uncertainty" of racing at times leads to the most amazing results, as it did here.

year-old and as a three had done little. He had, indeed, finished second, beaten only a head, for the Wood Ditton Stakes at the Newmarket Craven Meeting; but the winner, a moderate animal, Rock Lane, was giving him 5 lb. In the Gold Vase at Ascot he had by no means distinguished himself, and the idea that he had the faintest chance of beating Bayardo appeared altogether too preposterous to be for a moment entertained. Mr. Beddington had told me that he was not altogether without hope, but as for this, an owner is frequently apt wildly to exaggerate the capacity of his horse. Weight-for-age over two miles and five furlongs in July is barely 20 lb.: at two miles it is 18 lb., at three miles 21 lb. Here it will be seen Magic was in receipt of 36 lb., but this in no way altered the practically universal opinion as to the chance of the younger colt. After the race it occurred to some of the critics that Bayardo was not looking himself; before the start this opinion was not heard. Magic never won afterwards, and truly his career was a strange one—to have taken a single race and that from Bayardo! It was the last appearance of Mr. Fairie’s champion, a summary of whose achievements may be given.

The total of Bayardo's winnings therefore amounted to £44,534.

What a horse accumulates in stakes is no test of his merits. There are three who have exceeded Bayardo's aggregate—the late Colonel Harry M'Calmont's Isinglass is first with £57,185, the Duke of Portland's Donovan follows with £54,935, and then comes the late Sir James Miller's Rock Sand with £45,618. It is impossible to judge the relative value of the victories of horses who never came together directly or collaterally, who were separated from each other by periods of years. I have always strongly entertained the idea that Bayardo was certainly a far better animal than Rock Sand, basing the conviction to a great extent on the fact that Rock Sand showed himself a long way inferior to Sceptre and to Ard Patrick. Suggestions have been made to explain Bayardo's defeats in the Two Thousand Guineas and the Derby. As regards the Goodwood Cup, his third failure in the twenty-five races for which he started, it can only be said that the form was manifestly altogether wrong.

When Bayardo was at the height of his fame I asked Mr. Fairie one day how he came to name the horse, and he kindly sent me the explanation which I have thought it interesting to reproduce in facsimile.
Raymond was the principal elder of Rinaldo de Provence, who was one of the founders of the Priory of the Holy Sepulcher. He was originally found by the Priests of Rinaldo de Provence, who were the defenders of the holy land. Some of them, being ignorant of their relations to the founders of the Priory, did not join them, but they were invited by the Priests to come and live with them. The Priests then took them under their care, and taught them how to live in the monastery. They were very religious, and always wished to please their Master, the Prior. They were also very good husbands, and were always ready to do anything for their wives. They were also very kind to each other, and were always willing to help each other in time of need. They were also very wise, and knew how to judge between right and wrong.
Elias is unknown to find. Bayardo was of a bay color; I was a wonder animal. After Rinaldo's death he escaped I could never be caught again though many attempts were made to do so. Afterwards it was considered lucky to see the horse. He is supposed to be still alive, and the rumor goes that he has been seen on several occasions at various parts of the country. It is thought of by some of the bravos that the inhabitants have combined together to catch him, but have so far failed; also it is reported that a 'Almon' has come with him now with whom Bayardo seems quite happy.

CHAPTER IV

LEM BERG

In the year 1906 Galicia was sent to Cyllene, then standing at a fee of 100 guineas, which was increased to 300 guineas the following year, and the result was Lemberg, bay like his half-brother, a decidedly handsome colt when later on his make and shape developed, but perhaps somewhat deficient in the peculiarly high quality which distinguished Bayardo. It was early ascertained that Lemberg could gallop. He was tried on the 8th June as follows:

Lemberg, 2 yrs., 8 st. 8 lb. . . . Clark 1
Benwhat, 4 yrs., 8 st. 3 lb. . . . Hulse 2
Seedcake, 4 yrs., 8 st. 8 lb. . . . Toon 3
Maid of Corinth, 2 yrs., 8 st. 7 lb. . . Ault 0

Won easily by a length and a half; three lengths between second and third.

Here, it will be perceived again, the trial was not a high one. Sir William Bass's Benwhat was a bad animal. I think he never won more than a single little £100 race. Once he was second to an extremely moderate three-year-old who gave him 32 lb. and a year. Seedcake had 119 failed to win anything since he tried Bayardo twelve months previously. Maid of Corinth, the superbly bred daughter of Cyllene and Sceptre, had not run: she was to win two races later and to be twice second.

Fortunately a programme had been mapped out for Lemberg to a great extent following the lines along which the elder had travelled to fame. His first appearance was made in the New Stakes at Ascot, no more than 2 to 1 being offered against him in a field of twelve; against Bayardo, as we have seen, 7 to 1 was laid. A son of Sundridge, not at the time named, afterwards called Sunningdale, running as the Sweet Story colt, was almost in equal demand with Lemberg, the returned odds being 5 to 2. The idea that there was anything like equality between them was speedily dispelled; here Sunningdale finished third, four lengths behind Catrail, one of Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's breeding, by St. Frusquin—Catkin, who never rose to the first rank.

It will be seen that Lemberg won by a length and a half, precisely as Bayardo had done, and no sort of doubt existed that Mr. Fairie had found another good one. It seems strange that Lemberg should have been omitted from the National Breeders’ Produce Stakes at Sandown. For this Mr. Fairie had only nominated one, King Midas, a son of Persimmon and Bona

That 2 to 1 was laid on Lemberg affords evidence of the manner in which he had won at Ascot. Neither he nor Catrail had been out again prior to this Newmarket race, but though Catrail was receiving 7 lb. he was not supposed to have anything like a real chance. Mr. A. F. Basset's Prince Rupert was a colt of some pretensions. He had won the July Stakes at the previous Newmarket Meeting, and intermediately

Hall Walker's Lily Rose, to whom it will be seen Lemberg was giving a stone more than weight-for-age, was an animal of some capacity, for on the occasion of her next outing she won the Gimcrack Stakes, a race for which Mr. Fairie is not accustomed to enter, possibly—though as to this I am only guessing—from a disinclination to undertake a penalty of success, the making of a speech at the annual dinner of the Gimcrack Club.

Lemberg was next sent to Doncaster for the Champagne Stakes, and the betting on this race tends again to prove what was thought of him. All his three opponents were good winners, Lord Rosebery's Neil Gow, indeed, had taken the National Breeders' Produce Stakes at Sandown after getting badly away in easy fashion by four lengths; Major Eustace Loder's Admiral Hawke, an own brother to the famous Pretty Polly, had carried off the Chesterfield Stakes at Newmarket and the Lavant at Goodwood; Mr. H. P. Whitney's Whisk Broom, accepted as one of the best colts who has ever come from America, had easily secured the Prince of Wales's Plate at York. That odds of 15 to 8 should have been laid on Lemberg against such opponents is certainly a testimony to character; but this was to be his one failure in his first season.

Betting.—15 to 8 on Lemberg, 6 to 1 against Admiral Hawke and Neil Gow, 7 to 1 Whisk Broom. Won by one and a half lengths; length second and third.

It was afterwards demonstrated that between Lemberg and Neil Gow there was practically nothing to choose; here Lord Rosebery's colt beat him by two lengths and a half, form which was unquestionably wrong, and what added stronger proof of this was the position of Admiral Hawke, whom no one would rank with the son of Galicia. Lemberg's last three races were precisely the same as those which Bayardo had taken. In the Rous Memorial at the Newmarket First October, Bayardo had met one altogether unworthy antagonist; Lemberg was not to have quite so easy a task.

Lord Durham’s Rochester, a son of Rock Sand and Caparison, had been talked about for some time previously, though the betting does not indicate any fancy for him, notwithstanding that Maher was riding. Mr. Nelke’s Yellow Slave had shown herself a smart filly, having won four of the six races for which she had been out and finished second in the other two; but she gave Lemberg no trouble. As for Rochester, this was his only race as a two-year-old. He won the Column Produce Stakes by half a dozen lengths at his next appearance, as a three-year-old, but was only out twice more during that season, his trainer finding it impossible to get him quite right.

Whisk Broom had been going on so remarkably well in the autumn that Joyner, his really accomplished trainer, was not without some hope of winning the Middle Park Plate; and the American colt by no means disgraced himself.

Maher was, however, again riding Lemberg, as he had done in the Chesterfield Stakes and at Goodwood, whenever, indeed, he was not claimed by Lord Rosebery or any other owner who had secured his services, and though winning by a neck is not without a distinct element of risk, especially on the wide Newmarket course, there is no doubt that the distance by which he beat Whisk Broom could have been greatly augmented. This was, in fact, shown unmistakably in the Dewhurst Plate.

part of the gallop. Orphah jumped in and brought them along the last seven furlongs, finishing second.” It will be understood that he is not placed there in the record as he was not in the spin all the way. It is not a little surprising to find the fillies giving Lemberg weight. He and Bayardo, it will be observed, were running at exactly weight for age.

Neither Lemberg nor Neil Gow was out between their Newmarket struggle and Epsom, where the betting on the Derby certainly suggested that the Two Thousand was considered anything but a trustworthy guide. There were rumours to the effect that Neil Gow had not been doing particularly well in the brief interval between the races, but he was firm in the market at 11 to 4; a great many of his backers were, in fact, content to take less, and it may safely be assumed that there was not much the matter with him, nor indeed was he far off at the finish. Lord Villiers’ Greenback in getting to Lemberg’s neck did much better than there had seemed reason to anticipate. He had won the March Stakes a few weeks before, and his two-year-old performances had been unmistakably good: he was out ten times, won six of his races and was second for three of the others; but his victories had not been in the stakes which raise their winners quite to the front rank, though they had been of sufficient account to bring in £4344. There was nothing discreditable to Lemberg in being pressed by a colt of that capacity, for Greenback won his next three races, including the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Ascot and the Royal Stakes at Newbury, in which latter he beat Mr. Waldorf Astor's good filly Winkipop by three parts of a length, third, a neck behind, being Mr. C. E. Howard's Willonyx, to whom Greenback was giving 11 lb. It must be added, however, that Willonyx was far better as a four-year-old than he had been as a three. One feels, nevertheless, that Greenback was not, as a matter of real merit, within a neck of Lemberg.

Afterwards it seemed somewhat strange that this should have been the price, in view of the circumstance that Lord Derby's Swynford was one of the other five runners and in receipt of 7 lb. from Mr. Fairie's colt. The explanation of course is that Swynford was not ready. His first appearance of the season had been in the Lemberg missed the Sandringham Foal Plate at Sandown, which would have been worth over £1700, nor was he brought out for the Princess of Wales's Stakes at the Newmarket First July. He was also in the Zetland Stakes at the Second July Meeting, for which small event it was naturally not thought worth while to run him, it having been determined to keep him for the Eclipse, in which he was to meet his old antagonist, Neil Gow. It had been accepted as fact that Lord Rosebery's colt was not himself in the Derby, and in estimating chances at Sandown there was a reversion to the Two Thousand Guineas running, the question being whether, as alleged, Lemberg had suffered from interference when beaten a short head. The general idea that he ought to have won—with little or nothing to spare, doubtless, but still that with fair luck he would just have finished in front—was borne out by the betting on the Eclipse, in which it will be seen that Lemberg was just slightly preferred. Of the others, Placidus, though he had not done much in public, was reported able to do biggish things.

at home, and he found a certain number of rash supporters in the face of the two favourites.

A great race resulted. Sanguine backers of both Lemberg and Neil Gow persuaded themselves during the moments before the numbers were hoisted that there was a head in favour of the colt on whom their hopes were fixed. Pessimists similarly supposed that the horse in whom they were interested was just beaten. After what seemed an unusually long time the verdict was given—a dead heat, the first in the history of the race, not a very long history, however—though some of the results had been extremely close. Thus Lemberg's name was written below that of his half-brother, but as one of a bracketed pair.

Lemberg had of course been liberally entered.
He was in the three chief races for which he was eligible at Liverpool, also the Duchess of York his owner had decided to have him trained for the Leger, and he was delivered at Doncaster fit and well, the last of the classics being regarded as so good a thing for him that odds of 5 to 4 on were laid. The only other one supposed to have any real chance was Swynford, though fillies have done such remarkable things at this period of the season that Mr. Waldorf Astor's Winkipop found backers at 10 to 1, and Sir William Bass's Rose-won—at 100 to 7. Swynford was known to have come on extraordinarily since, as recorded, Lemberg had so readily disposed of him in the St. James's Palace Stakes. That race had, indeed, brought him on sufficiently to enable him to win the Hardwicke Stakes next day, and Mr. George Lambton had tried him so highly that it was believed he could not be beaten for the Liverpool Cup, which he won in a canter by five lengths, carrying 7 st. 4 lb. In the September of 1910, however, it was not supposed that Swynford was the equal of the Derby winner, and the Doncaster result was therefore somewhat surprising.

Swynford, as just remarked, had made phenomenal improvement. His admirers, and not without cause, were disposed to set him down as a great horse; but the explanation of this Leger seems to be that Maher rode a very bad race on Lemberg. It is conceivable that Swynford might just have beaten him, but no one with an appreciation of form will believe that Lemberg ought to have been beaten by over a length and a half, and particularly that Mr. J. A. de Rothschild's Bronzino should have beaten the Derby winner by the margin given, or indeed by any sort of margin. In spite of the Grand Prix I should have been inclined to handicap Lemberg as fully a stone better than Bronzino. As a three-year-old this latter colt was out nine times and won a couple of races worth together £1859. As a two-year-old he was out nine times without getting nearer than third. As a four-year-old he won nothing. As a five-year-old he made one appearance. It may be said that he was trying to do something, but he did not do it. In all he ran in two-and-twenty races and won the odd two; and this was the colt who beat Lemberg a length and a half! Of course it was wrong, recognition of which, however, afforded little recompense to the layers of odds.

After the Doncaster week Lemberg had four engagements and fulfilled them all, a fact which gives evidence of his soundness. His first race was for the Jockey Club Stakes, one of the only two nominal £10,000 races which now remain. The little spurt of extravagant prizes which marked the later eighties of the last century did not prove remunerative to the executives which organised them. It is difficult to suppose that Lemberg would not readily have won the Jockey Club Stakes from the best of those who were left in. As it happened he had comparatively nothing to beat. Ulster King had won the valuable Princess of Wales's Stakes at Newmarket, and there were supposed to be some possibilities about him as he came from what is known as a "dangerous stable." Manton, though it scarcely comes under that designation, for a dangerous stable is understood to imply the production of winners whose victories are not expected, has always been very dangerous indeed; it was so in the days of Alec Taylor, senior, and has remained so under the control of his son.

Dibs, a self-willed creature who used to give a great deal of trouble at the start, was really no more than a handicap horse, and in fact Lemberg won without an effort. He came to Newmarket for the Champion Stakes at the Second October Meeting to encounter Dean Swift, an old gelding who was not to be despised though doubtless in a different class from the colt he was meeting here.
Dean Swift, it need scarcely be said, for it is to be assumed that readers of these pages have some acquaintance with Turf affairs, had won the City and Suburban in 1906, again in 1908, and on other occasions had come near to success in the same Handicap. He seemed to improve with age, contrary to the usual order of things. In his race prior to the one under discussion he had been beaten two heads for the Chesterfield Cup

Dibs had run for the Cesarewitch the previous afternoon, which was not likely to have done him any good, but the ease with which Lemberg had beaten him in the Jockey Club Stakes when the five-year-old was giving 5 lb. showed that it practically made no difference whether he was giving or receiving what was in the circumstances a trifle. Royal Realm was a horse of some character, though not calculated to extend Lemberg. The colt's remaining engagement was at Sandown and gave him no sort of trouble.

Louvigny was a half-brother to Louviers, who had run King Edward's Minoru to a head for the Derby, but he never did much. It is improbable that the fact of Brancepeth having been left at the post made any difference to the result. Lemberg had thus won seven of the nine races for which he started as a three-year-old, counting the Eclipse Stakes as a victory, and the very short head in the Two Thousand Guineas had cost him an eighth.

As a four-year-old he did not entirely sustain his reputation throughout the season. That must be admitted if his career is critically regarded, but he assuredly continued to show himself a colt of very high character. He was not brought out until the Coronation Cup on the day after the Derby, and began his four-year-old season triumphantly, having shown himself to be well in a mile and a half gallop at Manton on the 23rd May. Here are details:

The great thing here is that he beat Swynford, thus avenging himself for his defeat in the Leger the previous year; and, moreover, Dillon, who wore Mr. Fairie's colours, was scarcely the equal of F. Wootton as a jockey, which is all to the credit of the colt Dillon rode. At the same time Mr. George Lambton declares that Swynford was backward at this period, though nevertheless rather more than a month before he had won the Chippenham Plate at the Newmarket First Spring Meeting, when, however, it is true that he had nothing to beat. The form was nevertheless accepted by racegoers at large, and when Lemberg next appeared, for the Princess of Wales's Stakes at the Newmarket First July Meeting, odds were freely laid on him.

It will be observed that Lemberg was giving Lord Derby's colt 5 lb., a serious consideration over a severe mile and a half. Swynford had incidentally cantered away with the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, and was, there is no denying, an altogether exceptionally good animal. He was indeed the one horse then in training by whom it was no discredit to be beaten; and that the form was sufficiently correct was demonstrated a fortnight afterwards in the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown, where the two met again. I cannot find that there was any excuse for Lemberg in this race, and it will be seen that he merely did what was expected, the betting being accepted as an indication. Swynford had been making the greater improvement; it must have been so, as the Eclipse Stakes course was certainly quite as well suited for Mr. Fairie's colt as for the long striding son of John o' Gaunt and Canterbury Pilgrim.

An interesting question came up for examination at Doncaster: whether Lemberg could stay? That his owner was convinced he could do so is shown by the fact of his having been put into the Doncaster Cup, run over a distance of two miles one furlong. There was one horse in the race whose capacity as a stayer had been thoroughly demonstrated—Lord St. Davids' Kilbroney, a son of The Wag and Innismakil. In the matter of class Kilbroney was admittedly in very poor contrast to the son of Cyllene and Galicia. Either a horse can stay or he cannot, however, and if he cannot, class is not of much avail against genuine stayers. Before going to Doncaster, Kilbroney had won the Goodwood Cup from 150 a staying filly, Martingale II, who afterwards ran second to Willonyx for the Cesarewitch. Kilbroney had won the Great Metropolitan at Epsom that Spring, the Summer Handicap at the Newmarket Second July, giving 16 lb. to Clarenceux, a colt of his own age who started there a strong favourite at 2 to 1. Prior to that Kilbroney had failed by a neck to beat a good horse called Pillo in the Northumberland Plate, giving the six-year-old winner 6 lb. He was therefore by no means to be despised.

The neck could have been extended, and the result must have been satisfactory to Lemberg's owner, who I am inclined to think had at any rate not imagined that staying was Lemberg's strong point. It is to be noticed that though he was entered for the Gold Cup he was not sent to Ascot.

In the Jockey Club Stakes Lemberg was stopped by his weight. He encountered a really good animal in Lord Derby's Stedfast, one of the best horses of the period. Between Stedfast and Mr. W. Pilkington's Prince Palatine, winner of two Ascot Cups, it was agreed that for a long period there was nothing to choose—and Prince Palatine is standing at a fee of 400 guineas. An accident on the road, a fall which severely injured his knees notwithstanding that he had caps on at the time, left ill effects on Stedfast. It must have been so, for in the Jockey Club Stakes of 1912 Prince Palatine gave him 13 lb. and beat him half a length, which could not have happened if Stedfast had been himself. He was at his best, however, when he met Lemberg in this race, and Mr. Fairie's colt, by reason of penalties which Stedfast had escaped, was giving 16 lb. more than weight-for-age.
AND HER OFFSPRING

Stedfast benefited by a 9 lb. breeding allowance, and Lemberg was giving 2 st. instead of the 12 lb. a four-year-old should give a three-year-old according to the conditions of the race.

GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

The betting shows that according to general opinion Lemberg was overtaxed. For the rest he walked over for the Champion Stakes at the Second October Meeting, and practically walked over for the Lowther Stakes, having only to meet a three-year-old called Bryony, who had got home once during the season in ten races. This was Lemberg's last appearance, and I may set out the record of his achievements as I have done in the case of his brother.

During his three years in training, therefore, Lemberg won in stakes a sum of £37,399. In this calculation I am taking the Eclipse Stakes at what it actually yielded to the owner, though in the totals published at the end of the season the whole amount of a stake is usually credited to a dead heater. To the aggregate named there is a considerable amount of place money to be added. As a two-year-old this was only a matter of £50 for his third in the Champagne Stakes. As a three-year-old Lemberg earned £400 for his second in the Two Thousand Guineas, £200 for his third in the St. Leger. The second in the Princess of Wales's Stakes received £500, £300 going to the owner and £200 to the nominator. In the Eclipse Stakes the owner of the second horse received £900, the nominator an additional £100. Half this went to Lemberg. He was also, as recorded, second for the Jockey Club Stakes, which brought 155 in £1700. Including place money Lemberg’s total of winnings therefore amounts to £40,659. In all he ran 23 races and won 17. Real good horse as Lemberg was, I think his owner reckons Galicia’s elder son as distinctly the better of the pair, though he might pause for a long time before endeavouring to estimate the superiority in pounds. Lemberg’s offspring have not run up to the period when I finish this book.

In 1909 the question arose to whom Galicia was to be sent, and Mr. Fairie decided on Major Eustace Loder's Spearmint, who was standing in Ireland at a fee of 250 guineas. Spearmint was certainly one of the most extraordinary animals in the history of racing. With scarcely an exception winners of the great classic races have been home-bred, that is to say, have victoriously carried the colours of their breeders. Spearmint, however, had been purchased at auction for the moderate selling plater price of 300 guineas. It is always well to avoid superlatives, but it may be doubted whether there was ever a cheaper horse than this son of Carbine and Maid of the Mint. At his first appearance he won the Great Foal Stakes at Lingfield Park, worth a nominal £1000 and really yielding £835. He was beaten for the Champion Breeders' Foal Stakes at Derby, finishing second to Colonel Hall Walker's Black Arrow; and carrying 9 st. he ran well up, fourth, for a Nursery at Newmarket. As a three-year-old Spearmint was only out twice, once in England, when he won the Derby from one of the best fields known for several years, and once in France, where he won the Grand Prix, starting, moreover, at a shade of odds on. This was Spearmint's last appearance. He had run five races and won three of them worth £17,239. The Grand Prix varies largely in value; in Spearmint's year it was £10,008, after which there was a marked increase, Sardanapale in 1914 having brought in £14,326.

The result of Galicia's visit to Major Eustace Loder's horse was a filly foal whom her owner called Silesia. She was pronounced remarkably good-looking by those who have the gift of judging the very youthful thoroughbred, and as a matter of course she was entered much as her distinguished half-brothers had been, except, indeed, that her first engagement was the Acorn Stakes, which, needless to say, is exclusively for fillies. "Races to Come" showed her in the Coventry and Windsor Castle Stakes at Ascot, the July Stakes, the National Breeders' Produce Stakes at Sandown, the Great Lancashire Breeders' Produce Stakes of £2000 at Liverpool, the Hurst Park Foal Plate of £1500, the Richmond Stakes at Goodwood, as also the Prince of Wales's Stakes at the same meeting, a Breeders'

Foal Plate at Kempton Park, a similar race at Manchester, the Buckenham Stakes, the Imperial Produce Plate at Kempton, the Cheveley Park Stakes and the Moulton Stakes, though for some reason she was left out of the Middle Park and Dewhurst Plates. Had she been in these her engagements would have seemed a model list of those which might be judiciously selected for a two-year-old of the highest class.

I have a recollection of asking her owner one day how she was progressing, for at the time Bayardo and Lemberg had made great names for themselves, and there was natural curiosity to know whether their sister was likely to rival their achievements. In this book I am saying as little as possible about the owner himself, for reasons which many of those who see the little volume will understand. Mr. Fairie prefers to remain in the background; but I may remark that he spoke with something approaching to enthusiasm of the promise Silesia was giving, of her resemblance to Bayardo in make and shape so far as a filly can resemble a colt, and furthermore in her action. Disappointment was expressed as the stakes into which she had been put passed by without her production. In fact, she did not run as a two-year-old, and next season was so far a further disappointment that she never won anything, though she took part in eight races. They were all, however, events of an important character. If Mr. Fairie had cared about the mere fact of winning, no doubt she might have run up a little score of successes. He kept her strictly to her engagements, she was sound and well, and she filled rather more than half of them, they having been fifteen in all. I shall not quote them in detail, seeing that her name never occupied the first place, but details of her performances in the classics may be given.

Mr. Walter Raphael’s grey filly, an odds-on favourite it will be perceived, did little. She had won the Derby two days previously and possibly may have been feeling the effects, though that this was not suspected prior to the race is abundantly demonstrated by the market. Silesia had a special quotation of 4 to 1 for a place instead of the ordinary fourth of the odds, 5 to 1, evidence that she was expected to improve upon her One Thousand running, as it will be seen she did, beating Belleisle, for instance, not to mention Tagalie; but Mirska won with a great deal to spare.

Silesia was sent to Ascot for the Coronation Stakes, which was supposed to be a good thing for Polkerris. Odds of 11 to 8 were laid on this filly, Mr. C. Carroll’s Melody, a daughter of Meddler and Ballantrae, making her first appearance of the season and sharing second favouritism with Silesia at 7 to 1, in just slightly stronger demand than Mr. August Belmont’s Qu’elle est Belle, a daughter of Spearmint. Silesia was fourth, Polkerris winning by a length from Melody, the latter giving her 4 lb. It should have been 7 lb., but F. Wootton, who rode, had to put up 3 lb. extra, being unable to ride less than 8 st. 6 lb. Silesia, with her maiden allowance, carried 8 st. 3 lb.

Mr. Fairie sent her to the post for the Eclipse Stakes, remote in the extreme as her prospects obviously were. It was supposed that Stedfast could hardly be beaten, odds of 13 to 8 being laid on him, Tagalie second in demand at 9 to

2, for her Oaks failure was excused, Prince Palatine 5 to 1, Lycaon 10 to 1, Silesia 33 to 1, La Bohème II 100 to 1, King William 150 to 1, John Amendall 200 to 1. I think that Stedfast ought to have won; but O'Neill on Prince Palatine gave Maher no room, squeezed him on the rails in fact, and beat him by a short head. Lycaon was third, six lengths away, John Amendall fourth, King William fifth, and Silesia next, in front of La Bohème II and Tagalie. At Liverpool it was thought that Silesia had some chance for the Knowsley Dinner Stakes. There were only three runners—Maiden Erleg, a 9 to 4 on favourite, carried 9 st. 6 lb., Silesia only 7 st. 11 lb., and she was backed at 11 to 4, being beaten a length and a half, with John Amendall bringing up the rear. Hurst Park was the scene of her next attempt, the Hurst Park Lennox Plate for three-year-olds the prize. Mr. Neumann’s Oiseau Bleu, who at the time of writing is performing with indifferent success over hurdles, shared favouritism with Honastir at 5 to 2, Silesia 7 to 1, and the race was taken by the latter’s stable companion Equanimity. This daughter of Bachelor’s Button carried 7 st. 12 lb., and won by a head from Honastir, 8 st. 1 lb.; Silesia, 8 st. 4 lb., third, beaten a length. A length and a head may perhaps be reckoned at something like 6 lb., so that here Silesia comes out much about the same animal as the winner.

It will be seen that she was seldom afforded anything like a real chance, and she certainly did not find one for the Jockey Club Stakes running against Stedfast and Prince Palatine. These two had shown themselves practically inseparable, and as here Stedfast was receiving 13 lb. it was supposed that he could not be beaten. Apparently he had not entirely recovered from the effects of his bad fall. Of this I have already written in the previous chapter. Those who had laid 9 to 4 on him, basing their calculations on his previous form with Prince Palatine, proved mistaken, the latter starting at 5 to 1 and winning by three parts of a length. Mr. Reid Walker’s Adamite was third, five lengths away, Silesia fourth. Her last appearance of the season was in the Newmarket Oaks against two others; Lord Lonsdale’s Eufrosina, 5 to 4 on, gave Silesia, 7 to 4 against, 10 lb. and beat her a length. It had been reasonable to expect better things from the good-looking half-sister to the two famous sons of the dam. She left the Turf a maiden, however, and it remains to be seen whether she will follow the example of so many other mares who have won nothing when in training but have earned reputation in the paddocks.
AND HER OFFSPRING

In 1910 Galicia was sent to Missel Thrush, his winning offspring having included a really good colt called Llangwm, whose three-year-old career had certainly been remarkable. After one failure in the Spring, in the Great Surrey Handicap, a five-furlong sprint down the Epsom hill, Llangwm had been out nine times and had won all his races with the exception of one, that one being the Derby, for which he had been third, beaten two lengths and a neck by Signorinetta and Primer. I have always entertained the strong impression that Llangwm ought to have won the great race, and probably would have done so if Maher, who rode, had been better acquainted with him, for on this occasion at least, or so it seemed to me, the jockey did not distinguish himself favourably. Later in the year, it is to be observed, Llangwm gave Primer 21 lb. and beat him a neck, which certainly seems to show that the Epsom running was ludicrously wrong! At any rate, Llangwm’s sire was chosen, and what might have been the result must remain a matter of speculation as the mare was barren, a lapse for which she made up next year by producing twins to Radium, a chestnut filly who was born dead and a bay filly called Zia. Of this young one no great opinion was formed, as may be judged from the list of her entries. As a two-year-old she was only put into seven races, beginning with the Kineton Stakes at Warwick, 5 sovs. each for starters with 100 added, following on with the Osmaston Plate at Derby, a £200 race, and the Mostyn Two-Year-Old Plate at Chester, a little stake of the same value. She was also in the Eglinton Stakes of £150 at York and the Stud Produce Stakes at the Newmarket First July; her other two entries were for Rous Plate at Doncaster, and, her owner taking a chance, somewhat in the nature of a leap in the dark, also nominated her for the valuable Buckenham Stakes of £300 each, half forfeit, at the Newmarket First October. That year there were only seven subscribers, and there is always, of course, a great possibility that nothing of any importance may be left in.

The list of entries formed a striking contrast to the lists which had been made for Galicia’s other offspring, and the event proved that Zia’s owner had acted judiciously. The filly was not sent to Manton. She was committed to the charge of Mr. Francis Lambton, who as Captain Lambton met a gallant death on the battlefield in France. Mr. Fairie’s horses, with the exception of two or three, remained at Manton; but Mr. Francis Lambton was getting a stable together at Newmarket, and his friends were anxious to help him. The races into which Zia had been put show that she was expected to do what little she could manage to accomplish early in the season; but it was not until the last day of September that she appeared, and then in a Two-Year Old Optional Selling Plate. She had no quotation and finished nowhere. Being fit and well, however, she was given another run for a similar Plate at the Second October Meeting. After these two exhibitions it is rather surprising to find her carrying 8 st. 11 lb. in the Downe Nursery at Liverpool, except, indeed, that none of the sixteen starters had less than 7 st. 4 lb. Zia did no more than she had done in her previous races, and coming out again for the Eglinton Nursery at Manchester, this time with 8 st., she did not attain to the mild distinction of having any price in the betting. As a three-year-old she made one appearance, in a handicap at the Newmarket Craven Meeting for animals of her age; she carried only 6 st. 11 lb., and made no show. It is to be feared that she must be set down as of small use for racing purposes. Lord Sefton bought her, however, it being arranged that if he sold her it must be to Mr. Fairie for the sum he had received, 500 guineas. Lord Sefton would have paid thrice as much, a mare so bred being valuable for the stud, but Mr. Fairie declined to accept more.

GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

In 1911 Galicia was sent to Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's Radium, who was standing at a fee of 200 guineas, which, indeed, his performances seemed fully to have justified. This son of Bend Or and Taia, a remarkably good-looking horse, had been fourth for Spearmint's Derby, behind Picton and the subsequent Leger winner, Troutbeck, but in front of Beppo, Gorgos who had won the Two Thousand for Mr. Arthur James, Black Arrow, Sancy, The White Knight winner of two Ascot Cups, Lally who started favourite for this Derby but failed through inability to stay, and amongst others Mr. Fairie's Plum Tree, who won him the Goodwood Cup later in the season. Radium did not run again as a three-year-old, but made exceptional improvement, as a four-year-old he carried off the Newmarket Biennial by three lengths from Troutbeck—the Duke of Westminster's colt, however, giving a stone—and then afterwards was second for the Great Yorkshire Handicap, securing the Lowther Stakes, the Rutland Handicap with 9 st. 10 lb.—giving the second, Impression, a colt of his own age, 3 st. 8 lb.—and the Jockey Club Cup, in which he beat The White Knight and that good stayer Torpoint. As a five-year-old Radium did still better. In the Coronation Cup The White Knight reversed the Jockey Club Cup form, as he did again in the Gold Cup, for which he beat Radium by a couple of lengths; but after Ascot Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's horse was out five times without defeat. He took the Dullingham Plate with 10 st. 6 lb.; the Goodwood Cup, 9 st. 2 lb., from Torpoint, 9 st. 7 lb., and The White Knight, 10 st.; the Doncaster Cup, The White Knight this time fourth at even weights. For the Beaufort Stakes at the Newmarket First October Meeting the horse walked over, and this year he had only one moderate opponent in the Jockey Club Cup.

Thus he went to the stud with excellent prospects, which may yet possibly be fulfilled. His son by Galicia was called Radames, a good-looking bay colt about whom up to the time of writing, however, there is little to be said. He came out for the New Stakes at Ascot, as his half-brothers had done; but 100 to 7 was offered against him, and he "had nothing to do with the finish," in which Colonel Hall Walker's Let Fly beat Mr. A. F. Basset's Roseland (the latter giving 7 lb.) by a neck, the late Lord Cadogan's Redfern, a head behind, third. Radames, indeed, made no show. His only other appearance was in the July Stakes. Roseland, 9 to 2 on, beat Mr. Neumann's Elkington, 7 to 1, by half-a-dozen lengths, Radames, 10 to 1, another half-dozen lengths away. This brings up the history of Galicia's offspring to the present time. For the season of 1915 all going well the successes of the family may be continued by a bay colt called Kwang Su, by Cicero, specially prominent now as sire of the King's Friar Marcus. Kwang Su is considered highly promising.

CHAPTER VI

BAYARDO AT THE STUD

In 1911 Bayardo went to stand at the Manton House stud at a fee of 300 guineas, and as a matter of course his subscription list was speedily filled. Amongst owners who sent mares was His Majesty the King, Loch Doon being chosen for the horse, and the result, a bay colt called Border Don, was generally admired. I remember Richard Marsh telling me that the colt "looked like racing and showed all his sire's quality." Evidence of what is expected from a horse is furnished by the entries made for him, and Border Don was put into six-and-twenty races as a two-year-old. He did not thrive, however, and could not be brought out until late in the season, when he ran for the Great Sapling Plate at the Sandown Meeting in October. He was not expected to win, it being correctly supposed that the race lay between Lord Michelham's Plucky Liège and Lord Carnarvon's Volta, who finished first and second with a head between them; Border Don figured in the betting, 8 to 1 being taken. Mr. Fairie himself had very few foals by his own horse. A filly named Ferrara, a daughter of Bona Dea, was afforded chances if she were good enough to take them, being engaged in the New Stakes, the Middle Park Plate, and other notable events; but she could not be produced.

The horse had only one winner in fact, fortunately one of some account, a filly called Good and Gay, her dam Popinjay, the property of Mr. Waldorf Astor. She came out for a newly-named race at Ascot, the Bessborough Stakes, apparently not much fancied, for she started at 100 to 8, there being a hot favourite in Mr. J. B. Joel's Polystome, Good and Gay winning, however, though only by a head, from a black son of St. Frusquin and Menda called Rossendale belonging to Sir John Thursby. Good and Gay was almost favourite for the Chesterfield Stakes at the Newmarket Second July, in which she finished third to Colonel Hall Walker's Follow Up, but she took the Buckenham Stakes from the same owner's Sea Eagle, the favourite, the Duke of Westminster's Manxman, a colt who had shown good form, beaten four lengths for second place. Her fourth and last appearance was in the Bretby Stakes, in which she was beaten a couple of lengths by a really good filly of Mr. Hulton's called Silver Tag. Good and Gay's two races yielded £3632, so that Bayardo had a not altogether humble place in the list of winning sires.

Five of his yearlings were offered by auction in 1913. Bayardino, a son of Lady Raeburn, made 810 guineas, a son of The Broom 450 guineas, another son of Royal Marriage 1500 guineas, one of Alicia 3700 guineas, bought by Lord Lonsdale, and one of Cheshire Cat 3100 guineas. In 1914 were sold three colts and a filly. Sir William Cooke gave 3000 guineas for a son of Dame d'Or, Captain J. G. R. Homfray 1000 guineas and Mr. H. M. Hartigan 700 guineas respectively for sons of Elizabeth M. and Evadne, and at the Second October Meeting the filly, a daughter of Star of the Sea, was purchased by Sir Thomas Dewar for 870 guineas.

In the spring of 1915 two young Bayardos came out at Newbury, a three-year-old named Wordsworth, dam Rydal Mount, who had not run the previous season, and a two-year-old, Ali Bey, dam Mowsali. The race in which the former took part was the Greenham Stakes for three-year-olds, and some of the best of the age opposed him, all, however, it should be noted, giving him weight. He carried 8 st. 5 lb. Colonel Hall Walker's Let Fly (9 st. 4 lb.) and
GALICIA: HER FORBEARS

Lord Carnarvon’s Volta (9 st. 1 lb.) were equal favourites at 11 to 4, odds of 8 to 1 laid against Wordsworth, and, Volta being unable to stay, the race ended in a dead-heat between Let Fly and Mr. J. B. Joel’s Sunfire (9 st. 4 lb.). At Chester the son of Rydal Mount was backed at 5 to 4 for the Eaton Maiden Plate and beaten a length by St. Ronald, making his first appearance. Ali Bey was one of twenty-eight starters for the Beckhampton Stakes, which came immediately after the Greenham. This two-year-old race has almost always been won by the favourite, notwithstanding that the field is invariably large: as many as thirty-eight have run. Precedent was followed. Duggie won at 5 to 2, Ali Bey fourth. At Chester the son of Bayardo took the Mostyn Stakes, 4 to 1 on him, from two poor animals; but next day, though beaten in the Ormonde Stakes, showed really good form. He finished second to Lord Derby’s smart Marchetta filly, giving her 10 lb., that is 7 lb. more than weight for sex, in front of winners, Louviers d’Or and Dalnacardoch. Ali Bey was beaten half a length, and according to his jockey ought to have won. His failure was attributed to an unusual reason. Some newspapers were being blown about in a high wind; they baulked the colt as he rounded the last turn and threw him out of his stride. He should certainly win races.

Sir William Cooke's Dame d'Or colt was also distinctly unfortunate to be beaten in the first race he ran, the Spring Stakes at the Newmarket Second Spring Meeting. He started at 11 to 10, and in more expert hands could hardly have lost. Donoghue on Captain Dermot M'Calmont's Roi d'Ecosse outrode the jockey on the favourite and won by a short head. Up to the time of writing the Dame d'Or colt has been out once more, and that successfully. He appeared at Windsor on the 22nd May, a memorable date, for on it was held the final meeting prior to a cessation of sport decried by the Government in consequence of the great war. For this Speedy Two-Year-Old Plate ten ran, and it was considered by most men, including Sir William, present in the khaki which at this period was so conspicuous on all courses, to be a good thing. At one time odds of nearly 2 to 1 were laid on the colt, but it became known that Lord Carnarvon's Sarrasin was much fancied, and the young Bayardo behaved very badly at the post, refusing to join his horses, so that his market position was affected, it being feared that he might be left. He started at 13 to 8 on,
GALICIA

2 to 1 against Sarrasin; but though the Dame d'Or colt was not off first he speedily took his place and won from Mr. Frank Curzon's Lady Binns, Sarrasin third. I wind up my book on the evening of this Windsor Meeting.
